FOREWORD

No economy can grow to its full potential unless both women and men participate fully. As half the world's population, women have an equal role in driving economic growth.

Women, Business and the Law 2018 is the fifth edition in a series of biennial reports measuring the legal obstacles to women who engage in economic activity around the world. Since the World Bank started this study a decade ago, our understanding has increased about how laws influence women's decisions to start and run businesses or get jobs.

The analysis draws on newly-collected data across seven indicators: accessing institutions, using property, getting a job, providing incentives to work, going to court, building credit, and protecting women from violence. The study expands coverage to 189 economies around the world.

The data show the challenge many women face in the quest for economic opportunity. One hundred and four economies still prevent women from working in certain jobs, simply because they are women. In 59 economies there are no laws on sexual harassment in the workplace. And in 18 economies, husbands can legally prevent their wives from working.

Social media movements such as China's #我也是; Latin America's #YoTambien; the Middle East's #أنا_كمان; and the United States' #MeToo have highlighted the prevalence of sexual harassment and violence in the workplace. But in many places, women still have no legal recourse. And every day we learn about industries that pay women less than men for doing the same work.

What actions can be taken to increase economic opportunity for women? How can governments improve labor market participation by their female citizens? Hard data helps answer these questions.

By informing politicians about the legal obstacles to women's economic opportunities, Women, Business and the Law makes a contribution towards promoting gender equality. The study celebrates the progress that has been made while emphasizing the work that remains to ensure equality of opportunity.

KEY FINDINGS

Globally, over
2.7 billion women are legally restricted from having the same choice of jobs as men.

Women, Business and the Law 2018 is the fifth in a series of biennial reports measuring gender differences in legal treatment. Since this research started, the realization of the importance of women's entrepreneurship and employment has increased significantly, as has our understanding of the relationship between legal gender equality and women's economic outcomes.

While understanding that women's access to employment and entrepreneurial activities is related to many factors, the data in this report illustrate how laws and regulations limit women's economic participation.

Consider the case of a girl who grows up aspiring to be a ship's captain. She excels at school in the hopes of getting her dream job. Maybe she is even hired to do it, but then she is fired simply because of her gender. What does this do to her aspirations and the aspirations of every girl who comes after?

Now consider the case of Svetlana Medvedeva, who studied navigation in college and graduated as a navigation officer in the Russian Federation. She applied to work as a ship's helmsman and was selected. Later she was told she could not have that job as Regulation No. 162 lists helmsman as one of the 456 jobs deemed too arduous, harmful or dangerous for women.<sup>1</sup>

Medvedeva took the company to court based on the Russian Constitution's equality provisions. Her case was dismissed because the court held that the purpose of the regulation was to protect women's reproductive health. She appealed and her appeal was dismissed. She further appealed to the court of cassation. That appeal was also dismissed. She then brought her case to the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women. The Committee found that she had been discriminated against because of her gender.<sup>2</sup>

After this decision, and five years after her case began, Medvedeva once again went before a Russian district court. In September 2017 the court found that she had indeed been discriminated against. However the court did not order the company to hire her and the ban on women ship navigators is still in place.<sup>3</sup>

Meanwhile other economies are making progress on the issue of gender legal parity. In 2016 the Constitutional Court of Colombia struck down as discriminatory the labor code's prohibitions on women's work in mining and in jobs deemed hazardous and arduous.<sup>4</sup> Bulgaria, Kiribati and Poland also eliminated all restrictions on women's employment.

From the outset, the purpose of the Women, Business and the Law report has been to inform research and policy discussions on how laws and regulations influence women's economic activity. This has largely occurred. From comprehending the importance of family law to women's economic decision-making to recognizing the effect of violence against women on their employment opportunities, Women, Business and the Law has contributed to a better understanding of why legal gender equality matters.

But not enough has been done to reach legal gender equality. Many laws prevent women from working or running a business. For example, 104 economies still have laws preventing women from working in specific jobs, 59 economies have no laws on sexual harassment in the workplace, and in 18 economies, husbands can legally prevent their wives from working. What effect do laws like these have on women's economic choices?

More research and evidence are needed to understand the effects of laws and regulations on women's entrepreneurship and employment so that policymakers can better understand which policies to promote. Women, Business and the Law builds on a growing body of research that stresses the importance of laws in shaping women's economic opportunities and improving gender equality. Research has called into question the notion that economic growth alone increases gender equality. Rather, continuous policy commitments to gender equality are required to achieve it.<sup>5</sup>

What is new in this edition?

To understand where laws facilitate or hinder gender equality and women's economic participation, Women, Business and the Law 2018 is providing scores for the first time for each of its seven indicators: accessing institutions, using property, getting a job, providing incentives to work, going to court, building credit and protecting women from violence. The indicator scores are a number between 0 and 100, with 100 being the best. The scores are obtained by calculating the unweighted average of the scored questions within that indicator, and scaling the result to 100.

The indicator scores facilitate research and policy discussions on how varying legal environments influence women's economic opportunities and outcomes. The scored questions are based on two criteria: their relevance to women's human rights as set out in the international women's rights framework, including the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), and research demonstrating their importance for women's economic empowerment (table 1.1).

Women's international human rights, as set out in CEDAW, serve as the underlying justification for each scored question. For areas covering violence against women, reference to international treaty law has been supplemented by the UN Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women and the CEDAW Committee's General Recommendations. Questions on maternity leave use the International Labour Organization's Maternity Protection Convention of 2000 as a benchmark (figure 1.1).

Fifty questions are scored within the seven indicators (box 1.1). The scored questions fall into three categories: those with explicit gender-based differences affecting women's entrepreneurship or employment (such as gender-based job restrictions), those reflecting the absence of laws protecting women (such as the lack of legislation on sexual harassment), and those examining institutions or processes that are likely to help women (such as anti-discrimination commissions). Details on the methodology and scoring of each question are available in the Data Notes chapter.

This report covers data for 189 economies including 16 that were not covered in the previous report: Cabo Verde; the Central African Republic; the Comoros; Cyprus; Eritrea; The Gambia; Guinea-Bissau; Kiribati; Libya; the Marshall Islands; the Federated States of Micronesia; Palau; Samoa; San Marino; the Solomon Islands; and Vanuatu.

Women, Business and the Law 2018 also presents a case study on women's financial inclusion and the law examining how legal and regulatory environments influence women's demand for financial services.

The Women, Business and the Law indicators complement other gender indexes that are constructed using outcome variables and, in some cases, qualitative assessments (figure 1.2). Although Women, Business and the Law focuses on key legal and regulatory areas that are directly controlled by policymakers, there are many other factors that influence women's economic opportunities—including educational levels and social and cultural norms—that are not captured.

Other indexes take varying approaches to developing gender indicators and present different views of women's societal position. Women, Business and the Law is one of the only global datasets that uses quantitative, objective data to measure legal gender gaps in policies. The "About Women, Business and the Law" chapter provides information on what is measured and what is not.

Women, Business and the Law scoring is correlated with the Global Gender Gap, Social Institutions and Gender, Gender Inequality and Gender-related Development indexes (figure 1.3). Showing that the policy variables measured by Women, Business and the Law are associated with outcomes tells us that the law influences what happens on the ground in areas such as empowerment, participation in the labor market and command over economic resources. As a result, one way to influence outcomes for women may be to reform laws and regulations that make it more difficult for women to participate in business and employment.

BOX 1.1*WOMEN, BUSINESS AND THE LAW SCORED QUESTIONS*Accessing institutions

1. Are married women required by law to obey their husbands?
2. Can a woman legally apply for a passport in the same way as a man?
3. Can a woman legally apply for a national ID card in the same way as a man?
4. Can a woman legally travel outside the country in the same way as a man?
5. Can a woman legally travel outside her home in the same way as a man?
6. Can a woman legally get a job or pursue a trade or profession in the same way as a man?
7. Can a woman legally sign a contract in the same way as a man?
8. Can a woman legally register a business in the same way as a man?
9. Can a woman legally open a bank account in the same way as a man?
10. Can a woman legally choose where to live in the same way as a man?
11. Can a woman legally be "head of household" or "head of family" in the same way as a man?

Using property

12. Who legally administers marital property?
13. Does the law provide for valuation of nonmonetary contributions?
14. Do men and women have equal ownership rights to immovable property?
15. Do sons and daughters have equal rights to inherit assets from their parents?
16. Do female and male surviving spouses have equal rights to inherit assets?

Getting a job

17. Is there paid leave available to women of at least 14 weeks?
18. Do women receive at least 2/3 of their wages for the first 14 weeks or the duration of the leave if it is shorter?
19. What is the percentage of maternity leave benefits paid by the government?
20. What is the difference between leave reserved for women and men relative to leave reserved for women, as a function of who pays?
21. Is there paid parental leave?
22. Does the law mandate equal remuneration for work of equal value?
23. Does the law mandate nondiscrimination based on gender in employment?
24. Is dismissal of pregnant workers prohibited?
25. Can parents work flexibly?
26. Can women work the same night hours as men?
27. Can women work in jobs deemed hazardous, arduous or morally inappropriate in the same way as men?
28. Are women able to work in the same industries as men?
29. Are women able to perform the same tasks at work as men?

30. Are the ages at which men and women can retire with full pension benefits equal?
31. Are the ages at which men and women can retire with partial pension benefits equal?
32. Are the mandatory retirement ages for men and women equal?

Providing incentives to work

33. Are mothers guaranteed an equivalent position after maternity leave?
34. Does the government support or provide childcare services?
35. Are payments for childcare tax deductible?
36. Is primary education free and compulsory?
37. Are there specific tax deductions or tax credits that are only applicable to men?

Going to court

38. Does a woman's testimony carry the same evidentiary weight in court as a man's?
39. Does the law establish an anti-discrimination commission?
40. Does the law mandate legal aid in civil and family matters?
41. Is there a small claims court or a fast-track procedure for small claims?

Building credit

42. Do retailers provide information to private credit bureaus or public credit registries?
43. Do utility companies provide information to private credit bureaus or public credit registries?
44. Does the law prohibit discrimination by creditors on the basis of sex or gender in access to credit?
45. Does the law prohibit discrimination by creditors on the basis of marital status in access to credit?

Protecting women from violence

46. Is there legislation specifically addressing domestic violence? If not, are there aggravated penalties for crimes committed against a spouse or family member?
47. Is there legislation on sexual harassment in employment?
48. Is there legislation on sexual harassment in education?
49. Are there criminal penalties for sexual harassment in employment?
50. Are there civil remedies for sexual harassment in employment?

WOMEN, BUSINESS AND THE LAW INDICATORS AND RELATED RESEARCH

Indicator	Research
Accessing institutions	A 2000 reform of Ethiopia's Family Code eliminated a husband's ability to stop his wife from working, among other things. Although the reform has now been implemented throughout Ethiopia, it was first introduced in three regions and two cities. In these areas, women's labor force participation and work outside the home increased. Women were also more likely to work full-time and in higher-skilled jobs. <sup>a</sup> Freedom of movement is a significant indicator of empowerment. It has been linked with women's economic independence as well as their expanded voice and agency. <sup>b</sup>
Using property	The gender asset gap can undermine women's bargaining power and capacity to engage in economic activities. <sup>c</sup> Giving women greater access to assets through inheritance can change outcomes for children, particularly girls. In 1994, two states in India reformed the Hindu Succession Act to allow women and men the same ability to inherit joint family property. This altered control over assets within families and increased parental investments in daughters. Mothers who benefited from the reform spent twice as much on their daughters' education, and women were more likely to have bank accounts and sanitary latrines where the reform occurred. The reform has now taken place across India. <sup>d</sup>
Getting a job	Policies such as paid parental leave are associated with increases in women's employment; however, extended durations of parental leave lead to reductions in women's relative wages. <sup>e</sup> Meanwhile, restrictions on women's work limit their ability to get the jobs they want and maximize their earning potential. Russia had a high gender earnings differential during its transition to a market economy, largely because of legal restrictions on the jobs women could perform. <sup>f</sup> Differences in wages and job tenure can largely explain the pension gap between women and men. <sup>g</sup>
Providing incentives to work	Support for mothers—such as tax credits and the availability of childcare for young children—can increase women's participation in the labor force. <sup>h</sup> Evidence suggests that spending on early education and childcare can increase women's labor force participation and reduce gender gaps. <sup>i</sup>
Going to court	Gender inequality can adversely affect women's ability to use the legal system. Access to legal aid and other services can improve women's access to justice. <sup>j</sup> Evidence shows that access to civil legal aid can reduce the need for social welfare programs, the time children spend in foster care and instances of domestic violence. <sup>k</sup>
Building credit	Prior to the passage of the 1974 Equal Credit Opportunity Act in the United States, banks often had explicit policies treating women differently from men. When the Act prohibited sex-based classifications and income discounting, the change seems to have had a dramatic effect on banking policies toward women. For example, the legislation had a favorable impact on women's ability to obtain mortgage funds. <sup>l</sup>
Protecting women from violence	In economies where husbands can prohibit their wives from working or where there is a high prevalence of violence against women, women are less likely to have formal accounts, savings or credit. <sup>m</sup> Meanwhile, sexual harassment at work undermines authority, reinforces gender stereotypes, and reduces women to sexual objects. A study of women who experienced sexual harassment at work in a United States community found that sexual harassment increases financial stress and can significantly alter a woman's career trajectory. <sup>n</sup>

The World Economic Forum's Global Gender Gap Index quantifies the magnitude of gender disparities and tracks progress over time across 144 economies and four thematic areas: Economic Participation and Opportunity, Educational Attainment, Health and Survival and Political Empowerment. It uses mainly quantitative outcome variables, such as the ratio of female to male labor force participation.	The OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index scores 160 economies on discrimination in social institutions. The composite measure is an unweighted average of five sub-indices: discriminatory family code, restricted physical integrity, son bias, restricted resources and assets and restricted civil liberties. The data are both quantitative and qualitative.	The UN's Gender Inequality Index provides a composite measure reflecting inequality of achievement between women and men in 159 economies. The index covers five indicators in three dimensions: reproductive health, empowerment (as measured by educational attainment and parliamentary representation) and the labor market. The indicators are based on quantitative outcome variables.	The UN's Gender-related Development Index examines gender differences in development outcomes in health, education and equitable command over economic resources. Covering 160 economies, the indicators are based on outcome variables and measure the gender gap by showing the female human development index as a percentage of the male.

Sources: Women, Business and the Law, World Economic Forum, OECD Development Center, and the United Nations Development Program databases.

Note: The WBL measure of gender legal equality is calculated as the average of the seven scored WBL indicators. Higher values mean greater gender equality in the Global Gender Gap Index (2016) and the Gender Development Index (2015); higher values mean worse gender equality in the Gender Inequality Index (2015) and the Social Institutions and Gender Index (2014).

Why do legal gender differences matter for women's economic participation?

Gender gaps in entrepreneurship are associated with decreased income and aggregate productivity. Research estimates that gender gaps cause an average income loss of 15% in OECD economies, 40% of which is due to entrepreneurship gaps. Losses are estimated to be significantly higher in developing countries.<sup>6</sup> Additionally, legal gender differences are estimated to decrease female labor force participation and undermine GDP growth.<sup>7</sup> Research estimates that for some economies, a large fraction of country differences in output per capita can be attributed to gender inequality, and many countries can increase output per capita by discouraging gender barriers in the labor market.<sup>8</sup>

The evidence indicates that laws can influence women's economic participation. In the United States, for example, more women started getting patents in the 19th century after some states passed laws granting women property rights in their own name as well as granting the ability for women to act as sole traders and retain their own earnings.<sup>9</sup> This same set of legal changes led to families investing more in their daughters' secondary education.<sup>10</sup>

Equality of opportunity allows women to make the choices that are best for them, their families and their communities. However, equal opportunities in getting a job or starting a business do not exist where legal gender differences are prevalent. Legal restrictions constrain women's ability to make economic decisions and can have far-reaching consequences. For example, women may decide not to work or start businesses in economies where the law makes it more difficult for them to do so (figure 1.4).

Where are laws better or worse for women?

The seven indicator scores make it easier to identify economies in which women can participate in specific economic activity by region as well as to identify economies in which there is room for improvement. While no economy gets a perfect score in all 7 indicators, economies that score in the top 20 across each indicator include the United Kingdom, New Zealand and Spain.

OECD high-income economies tend to have the highest average scores across most indicators. Economies in the Middle East and North Africa tend to have the lowest average scores across most indicators (figure 1.5).

Over a third of the economies examined have at least one constraint on women's legal capacity as measured by accessing institutions. Similarly close to 40% of economies have at least one constraint on women’s property rights as measured by the using property indicator.

Note: The WBL measure of gender legal equality is calculated as the average of the seven scored WBL indicators. The positive relationships between the WBL measure of gender legal equality and the ratio of female-to-male labor force participation rate (2016), and the WBL measure of gender legal equality and the percentage of firms with majority female ownership are statistically significant at least at the 5% level after controlling for the log of GNI per capita (2015), the ratio of female-to-male years (mean) of education (age 25+) (2015), the proportion of seats held by women in national parliaments (2016), and the rule of law (2016). Sources for the control variables include the World Development Indicators and Barro-Lee Educational Attainment databases. Regression analyses are based on 164 and 93 economies for which data are available, respectively. These statistical relationships should not be interpreted as causal.

Twenty-one economies from across 5 regions receive a score of 0 in the protecting women from violence indicator. In the Middle East and North Africa, 35% of the economies score 0 in this indicator, as do 19% of economies in Sub-Saharan Africa. Economies from other regions which score 0 include Haiti, the Federated States of Micronesia, Myanmar, Russia and Uzbekistan.

While the global average in getting a job is 67, South Asian economies have an average score of 39, the lowest across all regions.

For the building credit indicator, there is much room for improvement globally; 42% of economies score 0 on this indicator. Four regions—East Asia and the Pacific, the Middle East and North Africa, South Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa—each have an average score of 20 or below. The average score for low income economies is 8 (figure 1.6).

Which economies improved the most over the past two years?

Women, Business and the Law captured 87 changes toward legal gender equality across 65 economies, among the scored questions, over the last two years.

Of the five economies implementing the most reforms, four are in Sub-Saharan Africa: the Democratic Republic of Congo, Kenya, Tanzania and Zambia. One, Iraq, is in the Middle East and North Africa. Each of these economies reformed in three or more Women, Business and the Law indicators.

The Democratic Republic of Congo reformed its family code to allow married women to sign contracts, get jobs, open bank accounts and register businesses in the same way as married men. The economy also removed the obligation for a married woman to obey her husband and has allowed spouses to mutually choose the marital home. Additionally, the Democratic Republic of Congo lifted restrictions on women's ability to work at night in public or private industrial establishments. Further, the economy also now mandates nondiscrimination based on gender in various aspects of employment including hiring and promotions. Finally, the Democratic Republic of Congo now prohibits gender discrimination by creditors in financial transactions.

Kenya has enacted its first domestic violence law, which protects family members, spouses, former spouses and partners from physical, sexual, psychological and economic abuse. Kenya also now provides legal aid in civil matters and has improved access to credit information by distributing data from two utility companies that report positive and negative payment information.

Tanzania made primary education both free and compulsory and its new Legal Aid Act allows for legal aid in civil proceedings. Additionally, Tanzania improved access to credit information by distributing data from retailers.

Zambia's Gender Equity and Equality Act now prohibits gender discrimination in various aspects of employment and mandates equal remuneration for work of equal value. Zambia also established the Gender Equality Commission and prohibits discrimination based on gender and marital status in access to credit. Finally, Zambia established civil remedies for sexual harassment in employment.

Iraq enacted a new law that introduced electronic passports. The application process is now the same for men and women and no longer requires women to bring a guardian. Iraq also criminalized sexual harassment in employment. Iraq now guarantees workers returning from maternity leave the same position or a similar position with the same wage. Iraq also increased the length of paid maternity leave from 72 to 98 days. The country's new labor code now prohibits discrimination based on gender in various aspects of employment including hiring and dismissal. However, the labor code also allows employers to terminate employees' contracts when they reach the retirement age, which is unequal for men and women.

While Sub-Saharan Africa had the most reforms, South Asia had the highest percentage of reforming economies. Half of the economies in South Asia had at least one reform followed by Sub-Saharan Africa (45%), Europe and Central Asia (44%), and East Asia and the Pacific (40%) (figure 1.7).

The lowest percentage of reforming economies are OECD high-income economies (16%). However OECD high-income economies also have the best average scores across indicators.

The indicator with the most reforms was getting a job (28 economies) followed by building credit (24 economies). The least movement occurred in using property with only Ecuador demonstrating positive reform (figure 1.8). However, reforms affecting property are the slowest to occur.

The chapter on Reform Summaries provides a description of all reforms.

The following sections provide an overview of the main results by indicator.

Accessing institutions

The ability to make effective choices and transform them into economic outcomes is dependent on a supportive regulatory framework. Women, Business and the Law's accessing institutions indicator examines laws governing women's interactions with public authorities and the private sector to determine where women's agency and economic activities may be limited. There are several spheres in which women may face constraints on their legal capacity to act or ability to conduct transactions.

For example, limitations on married women's legal capacity, including the ability to work without their husbands' permission, weakens decision-making ability. Additionally, when women cannot independently decide where they want to go, travel or live, they may face difficulty getting to work or conducting business transactions. Such restrictions may stem from women's role in traditional societies, which was often limited by a fathers' or husbands' guardianship.

Today, this trend has largely been reversed among former colonial powers. In 1938 and 1975 respectively, France and Spain recognized a married woman's ability to contract in her own name. Many of their former colonies, however, continue to use old legal codes and have not adopted similar reforms.

In economies such as Equatorial Guinea, for instance, the 1960 Spanish Civil Code is still in force. Equatorial Guinea is now the only economy examined where a woman needs her husband's permission to sign a contract. Similarly, Chad, Guinea-Bissau and Niger still rely on colonial versions of civil laws that do not allow married women to open bank accounts without their husbands' permissions.

Constraints on women's agency and freedom of movement also persist (table 1.2). For example, in 18 economies women cannot get a job or pursue a trade or profession without permission. An exception to this is the Democratic Republic of Congo, which recently reformed a family code that was introduced by Belgium and adopted from the Code Napoléon. The reform allows married women to sign contracts, open bank accounts, register businesses, and get jobs without written permission from their husbands.

Reforms increasing women's access to institutions may contribute to women holding greater positions of authority. Women, Business and the Law analysis shows that women are more likely to hold leadership positions in public life when they have increased legal decision-making abilities (figure 1.9).

Using property

Strong property rights can allow women to leverage assets for economic gain. The using property indicator examines women's ability to acquire, access, manage and control property as a function of inheritance and marital property regimes. Access to property through these means can both increase women's financial security and provide them with the necessary collateral to start businesses.

Women, Business and the Law finds that women's property rights are positively associated with their leadership positions in the private sector. Women are less likely to have leadership positions in business in economies where their property rights are constrained (figure 1.10).

marital estates during and after marriage. In most economies this system is set by default. Called a marital property regime, it determines the allocation of assets between spouses and automatically applies to spouses that do not opt out.

Of the marital property regimes covered by Women, Business and the Law, the most common are separate property and community property. While separate property regimes allow each spouse to retain ownership and control over their own property with full administrative rights, community property regimes treat the property of either spouse as joint property regardless of who paid for it.

Studies arising from the Gender Asset Gap Project emphasize the importance of certain property regimes for women's property rights. For example, a comparative study of Ecuador, Ghana and the Indian state of Karnataka found that in separate property regimes, gender gaps in assets and wealth tend to be larger. In contrast, these asset and wealth gaps are smaller under community property regimes. The results show that in Ghana and Karnataka, women constitute just 38% and 20% of landowners, respectively. Both economies have a default separation of property regime. However, in Ecuador, where the default marital regime is community of property, women make up 51% of agricultural landowners.

Having strong property rights, including through marital property regimes, is a critical component of land ownership. Control of land or housing can provide direct economic benefits to women entrepreneurs (box 1.2).

Because women are more likely to perform unpaid activities that benefit the household such as child or elder care, they typically have fewer monetized contributions than men and therefore acquire fewer assets during marriage. Recognition of these nonmonetary contributions is important upon the dissolution of marriage as it can grant women access to a share of marital property. Though these contributions are

JOINT TITLING AND LAND REGISTRATION HELP EMPOWER WOMEN

Strong property rights and titling schemes encourage asset-based lending, or loans secured by collateral. Having titled property is particularly important for women in low-income economies, where entrepreneurship offers a chance to overcome poverty. Titled property provides proof of ownership, which facilitates its use as collateral. Government policies promoting joint titling, in which more than one person has ownership rights, can expand the pool of property women can use as collateral for bank financing. For some women, this may mean the chance to access credit and start a business.

Women, Business and the Law finds that some economies legally establish joint titling for married couples through marital property regimes or land laws. For example, Lesotho's Land Act establishes that property titles are held jointly for spouses whose marital regime is community property. In the Philippines, every title certificate belonging to a married couple is in the name of both spouses, as mandated by Presidential Decree 1529. Vietnam's Land Law also establishes joint titling when land use rights and houses are joint property. Some other economies with joint titling include Albania; Brazil; Bulgaria; Burkina Faso; Kosovo; Lithuania; the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia; Namibia; Paraguay; Rwanda; Slovenia; South Africa and Spain.

Additionally, some economies have introduced innovative laws to further promote women's land registration. For example, Nepal's 2017 Finance Act has discounted fees to register property jointly by spouses or under a woman's name. Serbia applies similar discounts. Finally, rural women and women heads of household in Colombia have preferential access to rural land formalization programs through Decree No. 902.

implicitly recognized in community property regimes, separate property regimes can penalize a spouse that does not earn an income during marriage. This income penalty can be mitigated in divorce by explicitly recognizing nonmonetary contributions to a household.

Of the 189 economies examined by Women, Business and the Law, 134 recognize nonmonetary contributions. These economies include all with default community property regimes and 28 of the 75 economies with separate property regimes.

Another reason for gaps between women's and men's ownership of assets may be inheritance rights. Often inheritance offers an opportunity for both men and women to own land or housing. For widows inheritance may be the only way to acquire ownership over assets and can be a crucial component of economic security after the death of a spouse. However, in 36 of the 189 economies covered, widows are not granted the same inheritance rights as widowers. Further, 39 economies prevent daughters from inheriting the same proportion of assets as sons. Differences such as these can limit a woman's economic prospects during a vulnerable phase of life.

Getting a job

The getting a job indicator examines laws and regulations affecting the millions of women working in formal employment globally. Starting from when a woman applies for a job through to when she retires, this indicator explores the policies that affect a woman's ability to work including her job prospects, earning potential, career growth and ability to balance work and family.

In the economies that score well under the getting a job indicator, more women tend to work relative to men. In these economies women also earn more money relative to men which demonstrates that labor market laws can both encourage women to enter the formal labor force and increase their earning potential (figure 1.11).

Job restrictions

Economies grow faster when more women work.<sup>11</sup> Although current good practice calls for gender equality in work opportunities, this has not always been the case historically. For example, the ILO's Underground Work (Women) Convention of 1935 and its 1919, 1934 and 1948 conventions on women's night

Note: The positive relationships between the getting a job score and the ratio of female-to-male labor force participation rate (2016), and the getting a job score and the ratio of female-to-male estimated earned income (2016) are statistically significant at the 1% level after controlling for the log of GNI per capita (2015), the ratio of female-to-male years (mean) of education (age 25+) (2015), the proportion of seats held by women in national parliaments (2016), and the rule of law (2016). Regression analyses are based on 164 and 138 economies for which data are available, respectively. These statistical relationships should not be interpreted as causal.

work called on states to prohibit women's employment in underground mines and night work in industrial undertakings. Similarly, in the years following the Industrial Revolution, several economies banned women from certain jobs to protect them from unsafe working conditions (box 1.3).

Though conditions have improved for both men and women over time, many gender-based restrictions remain. Industry restrictions, such as those on mining, are particularly common. Sixty-five economies restrict women from working in mining. Women also face job restrictions in industries such as manufacturing (47 economies), construction (37 economies), energy (29 economies), agriculture (27 economies), water (26 economies) and transportation (21 economies).

Additionally, in 29 of the 189 economies covered, women cannot work the same night hours as men. Night work restrictions exist in every region except in OECD high-income economies. The restrictions are most common in South Asia and the Middle East and North Africa, where women cannot work the same night hours as men in 63% and 55% of economies,

BOX 1.3 THE LASTING EFFECTS OF LEGACY LEGISLATION

Certain job restrictions are largely due to legacy legislation reflecting outdated safety standards. Restrictions on women's work in mining in many Commonwealth economies, for example, can be traced back to the United Kingdom's Mines and Collieries Act of 1842. Currently, almost half of Commonwealth economies place limits on the jobs women can do. In the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), most economies have a lengthy list of job restrictions for women, a remnant of a 1932 Soviet Union Law. Of the nine CIS economies covered, only Armenia does not have such restrictions. Similar trends exist in Francophone Africa, Lusophone Africa and the Spanish-speaking world.

Seventy-five percent of economies in Francophone Africa have regulations restricting women's employment, with many mirroring a 1954 ordinance from the former federation of French West Africa. Among these economies are Benin, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, the Central African Republic, Chad, the Democratic Republic of Congo, the Republic of Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Gabon, Guinea, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Niger and Senegal.

Portuguese and Spanish legacy legislation has also left a mark in many former colonies. Portugal first introduced a series of decrees restricting women's work in the 1890s. These decrees were not fully repealed until the early 2000s. Currently, almost every country in Lusophone Africa and Brazil has at least one restriction on women's work. Spain enacted a decree in 1957 prohibiting women from a variety of jobs, including in mining, certain construction jobs and electricity. This decree was repealed only in 1995. Currently, 12 economies in the Spanish-speaking world place legal restrictions on women's work: Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Equatorial Guinea, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama and Uruguay.

respectively. In total 104 economies continue to place restrictions on women's employment (figure 1.12). Research estimates that eliminating barriers that prevent women from working in certain sectors or occupations could increase

labor productivity by as much as 25% in some economies simply by increasing women's labor force participation.<sup>12</sup>

Workplace protections

Workplace protections, however, can facilitate women's ability to secure and sustain employment. For example legal protections such as gender-based nondiscrimination in employment can encourage the entry of women into the workforce. Similarly guaranteeing equal remuneration for work of equal value can ensure that women are not discriminated against when receiving wages and benefits.

Although almost 80% of the studied economies prohibit gender discrimination in employment, only 40% mandate equal remuneration for work of equal value. This standard originates from the ILO's Equal Remuneration Convention and provides a broader framework than equal pay for equal work as it allows a comparison between not only the same or similar jobs, but also between different jobs of equal value.

Most OECD high-income economies and economies in Europe and Central Asia mandate equal remuneration for work of equal value. Forty percent of the economies in Sub-Saharan Africa also do so, while only 25% or fewer of the economies in Latin America and the Caribbean, the Middle East and North Africa, East Asia and the Pacific and South Asia mandate equal remuneration.

Leave benefits

The regulatory environment also plays a significant role in shaping women's ability to both get jobs and remain in the labor force after starting a family. Maternity, paternity and parental leave schemes can help recognize and redistribute unpaid care work. Ensuring job-protected leave of adequate length and pay for both parents is critical for a variety of health, economic and social development outcomes. The International Labour Organization's (ILO) 2000 Maternity Protection Convention establishes a minimum of 98 days (14 weeks) of paid maternity leave. Wage replacement is set at a minimum of 67% (2/3) of earnings ideally provided through compulsory social insurance or public funds.

Globally the median length of paid maternity leave matches the ILO standard of 14 weeks with corresponding wage replacement varying from 25% to 100% of earnings. Only 7 economies have no paid leave available to mothers. These economies include the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Suriname, Tonga and the United States.

The cost of hiring women of childbearing age is higher for employers in economies in which laws mandate that employers pay for leave benefits and in which the length of leave available to mothers significantly exceeds the length of leave available to fathers. The median length of paid paternity leave is only 5 days in the 91 economies that mandate it meaning maternity leave is a full 93 days longer on average.

In India, for example, employers may view the recent increase of maternity leave from 84 to 182 days as a disincentive to hiring women because employers bear the full cost. Employers have no legal obligation to provide paid paternity leave. The disparity between the cost of hiring women compared to men may also lead employers to reduce women's salaries to compensate for paying women higher leave benefits.

However if the cost of maternity leave is paid for by the government, firms do not necessarily face higher costs for hiring women. Governments pay 100% of leave benefits for mothers in 96 economies. In 53 economies employers pay 100% of leave benefits. In 27 economies, governments pay 50% or more of such benefits.

Some economies are shifting away from maternity and paternity leave in favor of parental leave. For example, in 2015 the United Kingdom reformed its leave policies so that 37 weeks of paid maternity leave may be taken as shared, paid parental leave. Of the 42 economies with paid parental leave, almost 90% provide it in addition to maternity leave. Paid parental leave is most commonly found in high and upper-middle-income economies.

Parental leave is normally available to both parents. However, women tend to use it more than men. Although longer and higher paid leave for mothers has significant benefits, too much time out of the labor force may negatively affect a woman's career progression and earnings.<sup>13</sup> The key to designing leave policies that do not exacerbate gender inequality may be in promoting fathers' uptake of leave (table 1.3).

A recent report examining more than 100 leading studies related to infant and child health and well-being, maternal health, gender equality and economic impact concluded that the optimal length of paid leave to ensure optimal infant and child health and well-being is one year split equally between parents.<sup>14</sup>

When maternity, paternity and parental leave end, working parents continue to have family responsibilities that may affect their jobs. Laws that promote flexible work arrangements can reduce work-family conflicts. Moreover the ability to work reduced hours, to work variable hours (flextime), to telework or to have working-time autonomy can benefit both businesses and employees by reducing operational costs and turnover expenses and by improving productivity and work-life balance.<sup>15</sup> Of the economies covered by Women, Business and the Law, just 33 economies explicitly grant parents the right to request or obtain flexible work arrangements by law.

Retirement

When it comes to leaving the workforce, statutory retirement ages set career expectations and durations for working men and women. Laws that establish earlier retirement ages for women can negatively affect their lifetime earnings,

France	Parents receive higher payments if they both take some leave.
Italy	Parents receive an additional month of leave if the father takes at least 3 of the initial 10 months.
Germany	Parents receive pay for an additional 2 months of leave if they each take at least 2 of the initial 12 months.
Japan	Parents receive an additional 2 months of paid leave if they share the initial 12 months.
Korea, Rep.	The second parent to take parental leave (typically the father) receives 100% of his wages up to a ceiling for 3 months. The first parent receives 40%.
Norway	Seventy days of the total postnatal parental leave period are reserved for each parent.
Portugal	Parents who share the initial 120 days of parental leave receive an additional 30 days.
Romania	The parent who did not initially request parental leave (typically the father) is obliged to take 1 of the 24 months of leave.
Sweden	Ninety of the 480 days of paid parental leave are reserved for each parent.

pension benefits and retirement savings as well as their career growth prospects. When women are required to retire at an earlier age than men, they end their working lives with fewer years of employment. Conversely, if women enjoy the same statutory retirement age as men, years of employment are equalized and labor force participation can be encouraged.

Gender-differentiated retirement ages exist in every region of the world with the highest percentages in economies in the Middle East and North Africa (58%) and Europe and Central Asia (40%). Retirement is mandatory in almost a quarter of economies with gender-differentiated retirement ages.

In 41 of the 189 economies measured, women can retire with full benefits 1 to 10 years earlier than men. Most economies with gender-differentiated retirement ages have a 5-year gap between women's and men's retirement ages. The largest gap is in China where women can retire at age 50, 10 years before men.

In 13 economies laws allow women to retire with partial benefits earlier than men. These economies include Albania, Algeria, Bahrain, Brazil, Bulgaria, Costa Rica, the Islamic Republic of Iran, the Kyrgyz Republic, Pakistan, Panama, Switzerland, the United Arab Emirates and the Republic of Yemen. In economies with such differences, women may forgo promotions and raises through early retirement. Women also contribute less to their pensions and savings in these circumstances, which can lead to financial hardship in retirement.<sup>16</sup>

Providing incentives to work

Governments can also facilitate balancing work and family by supporting and incentivizing mothers' ability to return to the workforce after childbirth. Income tax regulations and support for age-appropriate childcare and education can affect a woman's decision to enter and remain in the workforce. The providing incentives to work indicator analyzes such benefits and the ways in which they can influence women's decisions to work.

The ease, cost and availability of care for young children can affect whether a mother works outside the home. Because women are often the primary caregivers for children, public assistance for childcare can create opportunities for women to enter the workforce. For example one study found that among OECD economies the availability of public childcare for children below the age of 5 years is strongly correlated with employment rates of mothers with young children.<sup>17</sup>

Over two-thirds of the economies covered by Women, Business and the Law directly provide childcare services or subsidize private childcare services. In Finland, for instance, municipal early childhood education is available from when the maternity and parental allowance periods finish until the child goes to primary school. As an alternative parents can choose to use private day care centers whose fees will be covered by the Social Insurance Institution through the Private Daycare Allowance. In other economies such as Ghana, Brazil and Costa Rica, preschool is free and compulsory starting at age four. Policies such as these can make childcare more affordable and enable parents to work.

Personal income tax deductions for childcare fees can also reduce the burden of childcare costs for parents. Though less common than publicly provided or subsidized childcare, this type of tax deduction can influence a parent's decision to return to or enter the workforce.

In 33 of the economies covered childcare payments are tax deductible. All the economies that provide for tax deductible childcare payments are upper-middle and high-income, except Bhutan and El Salvador. Bhutan is also the only economy in South Asia to provide this incentive, and only one economy in the Middle East and North Africa region—Malta—provides the benefit.

Women, Business and the Law finds that the enrollment of children in preprimary education is higher in economies that provide deductions for childcare fees than in economies without such deductions (figure 1.13).

A woman's decision to participate in formal employment may be affected in economies where there are gender differences in personal income tax regulations. Some economies grant tax deductions or credits to male taxpayers by default, reducing their taxable income and increasing take home pay. In some cases, this may mean that women pay disproportionately higher taxes than men. Without access to the same deductions or credits, women end up paying more in taxes which reduces their take home pay and provides a disincentive to entering the formal labor market.

Of the 189 economies covered, 15—Benin, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, the Democratic Republic of Congo, the Republic of Congo, Guinea, Indonesia, Iraq, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libya, Malaysia, Morocco, the Philippines, Togo and Tunisia—grant tax deductions or credits to male taxpayers by default.

In Guinea for example, a male taxpayer is entitled to a deduction for each dependent child and each wife. Minor children of married taxpayers are considered dependents of the husband. The wife receives tax benefits only if the husband is absent or incapacitated. In Iraq women receive tax deductions only if they are unmarried, divorced or widowed. In Malaysia a male taxpayer receives tax deductions for his dependent wife.

In limited circumstances women may be able to receive the same deductions or credits that men receive, but not by default. For example in cases of joint filing in Togo, tax credits for dependents are provided to the male head of household. The wife can also receive this head of household tax credit, but only if specific criteria are met.

Similarly, in Tunisia the male head of household receives tax deductions for dependent parents and children. The wife can receive these same deductions if she is considered the head of household. However this happens only if the husband has no income or if the wife remarries and has custody of the children.

Going to court

By strengthening the rule of law and narrowing inequality, access to justice allows people to use the legal system to advocate for their interests and ensures enforcement of the law. The going to court indicator assesses women's access to justice by examining justice institutions and procedures enhancing access to the legal system.

Unequal treatment in court can undermine women's legal capacities. The provision of testimony plays a key role in the outcome of any case and is a witness's opportunity to present an accurate rendering of facts. Testimony can affect the distribution of resources among women and men particularly in cases where economic rights are at issue.

Women, Business and the Law examines where women's testimony does not carry the same evidentiary weight in court as men's. In 16 economies the law differentiates between the evidentiary value of women's and men's testimony. Twelve of these economies are in the Middle East and North Africa (Bahrain, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Libya, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the Syrian Arab Republic, West Bank and Gaza and the Republic of Yemen), two are in Sub-Saharan Africa (Mauritania and Sudan), one is in East Asia and the Pacific (Brunei Darussalam) and one is in South Asia (Pakistan).

Institutions that are not courts can also play an important role in ensuring women's access to justice. Anti-discrimination commissions are independent from the justice system and responsible for protecting, monitoring and promoting fundamental rights. Women, Business and the Law examines anti-discrimination commissions that are mandated to receive complaints of gender discrimination by both public and private actors.

Commissions can advise governments on policy issues such as occupational segregation, the gender wage gap and women's labor force participation. For example New Zealand's Human Rights Commission examined equal employment opportunities in the female-dominated elderly care sector. Based on its recommendations regarding pay, working conditions and workforce training, the Employment Court found that a care workers' low pay was a breach of the Equal Pay Act.<sup>18</sup>

Of the 189 economies covered by Women, Business and the Law, 93 have established commissions that receive complaints from victims of gender discrimination (map 1.1). Europe and Central Asia has the highest percentage of economies with such institutions at 72%. In contrast, only 20% of the economies in the Middle East and North Africa have established them.

For women who cannot afford legal representation, the provision of legal aid can improve access to courts. A recent study in the United States shows that the funding of legal services can return as much as 11 times the amount invested. For example a woman who suffers domestic abuse and uses legal aid to get a restraining order loses fewer days of work. Similarly a mother who can secure spousal and child support with the assistance of civil legal aid may not require public benefits.<sup>19</sup> This was the case in Ecuador where three legal aid clinics were established to assist poor women and children. Because of the support provided by these clinics there was a 17% reduction in the probability that women would suffer domestic violence following a divorce. Inversely, the probability that female clients would receive child support increased by 10%.<sup>20</sup>

Women, Business and the Law data show that 120 economies mandate legal aid in civil or family matters. For example, in 2016 Ethiopia passed legislation mandating legal aid services for indigent women in civil actions. Tanzania's Legal Aid Act of 2017 also authorized legal aid in civil and criminal proceedings.

Legal formalities and the cost of litigation, both direct and indirect, can further discourage women and poor people from accessing justice. Relaxed rules of procedure could enhance courts' responsiveness to demands for the enforcement of social and economic rights.<sup>21</sup> One way to achieve this is through the establishment of small claims courts which hear civil cases involving relatively small amounts of money. Procedures in these courts are simplified with reduced cost and faster judgment time. Small claims courts are ideal for small businesses, many of which are owned by women.

Women, Business and the Law finds that 131 economies worldwide have small claims courts. Among these are Côte d'Ivoire and Indonesia, which each introduced small claims courts in 2015. Other economies, however, have elected to abolish small claims courts. New codes of civil procedure in Ecuador and Hungary recently eliminated small claims in favor of resolution by arbitration or mediation.

Building credit

A strong institutional environment is key to expanding access to finance for women-owned businesses. If effective, it should recognize the constraints women face when accessing credit including the effects of discrimination and women's limited credit history compared to men's. The building credit indicator assesses women's access to finance and the strength of credit reporting systems. Establishing a good credit history may help women who lack access to property build reputation collateral for loans.

The ability to build such a history, however, could be affected by discriminatory lenders. Policy interventions can encourage women's entrepreneurship by prohibiting discrimination by creditors based on gender and marital status.

Legislation prohibiting gender-based discrimination in financial services exists in 72 of the 189 economies examined. Thirty-six of these economies also prohibit discrimination in financial services based on marital status. Such provisions can be found in a variety of legislation ranging from nondiscrimination and gender equality laws to credit acts and consumer protection ordinances.

In Latin America and the Caribbean such provisions are particularly common in consumer protection laws. For example Nicaragua's consumer protection law puts a duty on providers to offer financial services without discrimination based on gender or marital status. In Europe and Central Asia gender equality acts often prohibit discrimination. For example Albania's Gender Equality Act prohibits discrimination in banking services, including loans, deposits and financing.

Women, Business and the Law data show that more women have formal accounts at financial institutions and debit cards in their own names in economies where the law prohibits discrimination based on gender in access to credit (figure 1.14).

Protecting women from violence

Protection against violence is also important to ensuring women's economic empowerment. Violence against women undermines economic empowerment by preventing employment and blocking access to financial resources. Women can function more freely in societies and the business world when not faced with the threat of violence. The protecting women from violence indicator examines the existence and scope of legislation on violence against women including domestic violence and sexual harassment.

Domestic violence is gender-specific violence perpetrated by family members or intimate partners and can encompass different types of abuse. Worldwide nearly 1 in 3 women have experienced physical or sexual violence from an intimate partner. Intimate partners commit as many as 38% of all murders of women.<sup>22</sup> Domestic violence legislation is a key first step towards ensuring women's protection.

Of the 189 economies examined, 45 do not have laws on domestic violence. However, 9 of these 45 economies—Belgium, Canada, Chad, Djibouti, Estonia, Libya, Madagascar, Morocco and Tunisia—have aggravated penalties for specific types of abuse committed between spouses or family members rather than domestic violence laws. This addresses the issue by intensifying penalties for intrahousehold violence.

Of the remaining 36 economies with no domestic violence laws or aggravated penalties for violence at home, 19 are in Sub-Saharan Africa and 10 are in the Middle East and North Africa. Economies in other regions are also missing such laws. These economies include Afghanistan, Armenia, Haiti, the Federated States of Micronesia, Myanmar, Russia and Uzbekistan.

Although women are statistically at greater risk of violence from an intimate partner, other forms of violence are also common. In the workplace and other arenas, for example, women may face sexual harassment. Sexual harassment involves the abuse of a position of hierarchy or a significant power disparity.

Traditionally sexual harassment has been linked to employment. However sexual harassment may occur in other spheres including education. Economies have begun addressing sexual harassment through various types of legislation including anti-discrimination statutes and criminal law.<sup>23</sup>

Women, Business and the Law finds that women are more likely to have majority ownership in firms in economies where workplace sexual harassment laws exist (figure 1.15).

Of the 189 economies covered by Women, Business and the Law, 130, including every economy in South Asia, have laws prohibiting sexual harassment in employment. However, 59 economies still do not have such laws.

In the Middle East and North Africa, for example, 70% of the examined economies do not have legislation protecting women from sexual harassment at work. In East Asia and the Pacific approximately half of the examined economies do not have such laws. In Latin American and the Caribbean approximately one-third of economies do not. In Europe and

This statistical relationship should not be interpreted as causal.

Central Asia approximately a quarter of economies lack workplace harassment laws. Japan is the only OECD high-income economy that does not legally protect women from sexual harassment at work.

However, some economies have recently reformed in this area. One economy, Cameroon, adopted a new criminal code covering sexual harassment in employment and education.

Without such protections in place sexual harassment at work can undermine careers, the ability to work and the employment climate.

From inform to reform

By scoring these seven spheres of working women's lives, Women, Business and the Law hopes to highlight legislation affecting women's prospects as employees and entrepreneurs and to identify potential areas for reform. There is growing evidence linking women's legal rights and economic opportunities. Women, Business and the Law 2018 provides a rich body of data across its seven indicators that can be used to generate policy action and to lay a roadmap for further research.

ABOUT WOMEN, BUSINESS AND THE LAW

In its fifth edition,
Women, Business and the Law expands to 189

economies.

Major differences in legal gender parity persist around the world. Many laws continue to prevent women from improving their own well-being and that of their families by working or running a business.

How can governments improve women's access to entrepreneurial and employment activities? Answering this question requires understanding many factors—from access to education and health care, to social and cultural norms and many things beyond. One important factor is how laws, regulations and institutions differentiate between women and men in ways that affect women's incentives or capacity to work or set up and run a business.

Since its inception in 2009, Women, Business and the Law has collected data on laws and regulations constraining women's entrepreneurship and employment. The data set illuminates how government policies limit women's economic participation through unequal laws and a business environment that does not adequately support women's employment.

This edition of Women, Business and the Law introduces an innovation by scoring questions at the indicator level. The indicator-level scoring is meant to promote discussion and analysis on which laws matter the most for women's entrepreneurship and employment, as well as encourage economies to follow good practices and to reform.

By gathering and analyzing quantitative data to compare gender legal differences across economies and over time, Women, Business and the Law offers objective benchmarks for assessing where reforms have occurred that are helpful in measuring global progress toward gender legal equality (box 2.1).

Women, Business and the Law 2018, the fifth in a series, provides data on legal and regulatory barriers to women's entrepreneurship and employment in 189 economies, up from 173 covered in the 2016 edition (table 2.1). This expansion enhances the global data on laws and regulations affecting women's prospects as entrepreneurs and employees while allowing broader comparison.

BOX 2.1 SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOAL INDICATOR 5.1.1

On September 25, 2015, member states of the United Nations adopted a set of goals aimed at ending poverty, protecting the planet and ensuring prosperity for all. This new sustainable development agenda consists of 17 "Global Goals," each with specific targets to be achieved in the next 15 years. Realizing the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) is a collective effort between governments, the private sector and civil society.

SDG Goal 5 strives to achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls. To accomplish this, economies must focus their efforts on tackling the systemic barriers restricting women's rights and opportunities. The objective of Target 5.1 is to end all forms of discrimination against women and girls everywhere. This requires a framework of indicators and statistical data to monitor developments, inform policy decisions and ensure stakeholder accountability.

Creating an enabling environment for women and men to enjoy equal rights and opportunities is enshrined in Indicator 5.1.1, which aims to measure whether or not legal frameworks are in place to promote, enforce and monitor equality and nondiscrimination on the basis of sex. Although there has been progress in reforming laws, unequal constitutional and legislative provisions in family, personal, penal and other laws persist. Indicator 5.1.1 is crucial to accelerating legal reform in these areas by tracking the removal of discriminatory provisions as well as the adoption of laws and implementation mechanisms that promote gender equality.

UN Women, the OECD Development Centre's Social Institutions and Gender Index and the World Bank Group's Women, Business and the Law are jointly working to develop, measure and track progress on Indicator 5.1.1. It is hoped that this collaboration will significantly contribute to efforts to achieve gender equality and women's empowerment by 2030.

What does Women, Business and the Law measure?

Women, Business and the Law 2018 provides quantitative measures of laws and regulations affecting women's economic opportunities in seven areas: accessing institutions, using property, getting a job, providing incentives to work, going to court, building credit and protecting women from violence.

- Accessing institutions explores women's ability to interact with public authorities and the private sector in the same ways as men, through examining constraints on women's legal capacity.
- Using property analyzes women's ability to access and use property based on their ability to own, manage, control and inherit it. It also examines whether legislation accounts for nonmonetary contributions, such as unpaid care for children or the elderly, in distributing assets upon the dissolution of marriage.
- Getting a job assesses restrictions on women's ability to work, such as prohibitions on working at night or in certain industries. It also covers laws on maternity, paternity and parental leave, retirement ages, equal remuneration for work of equal value, nondiscrimination at work and flexible work options.
- Providing incentives to work examines childcare and tax support, through assessing tax deductions and credits, childcare and primary education.
- Going to court explores women's ability to access justice by examining the evidentiary weight of women's testimony, the existence of justice institutions such as anti-discrimination commissions and small claims courts and mandates for legal aid.
- Building credit examines credit bureaus and registries that collect information from retailers and utility companies. It also covers nondiscrimination in access to credit based on gender and marital status.

- Protecting women from violence considers laws on domestic violence and sexual harassment in education and employment.

In addition, a case study is included examining how discriminatory laws can affect women's demand for financial services. For example, limited access to and control over property constrain women's ability to provide collateral for loans. Similarly, gender differences in getting identification can make it more difficult for women to open bank accounts, especially where there are stringent identification requirements.

What does Women, Business and the Law not measure?

Equal opportunities for women in business and the workplace depend on the interplay of economic, social and cultural factors. For example, unless women have opportunities to get an education or build their skills, equalizing laws affecting entrepreneurship and employment mean little. Other factors, such as infrastructure—for example, safe transportation—might also affect women's ability and desire to work in certain locations or at night. And social and cultural norms may prevent women from running businesses or working outside the home.

While recognizing that many issues affect women's economic opportunities, Women, Business and the Law focuses on the formal legal and regulatory environment determining whether women can open their own businesses or work. Not everything of importance is covered. Rather the report is concerned with the laws governing the formal economy. Although most women in developing economies start businesses or work in the informal economy, a goal of this project is to define some of the features of the legal framework that make it more difficult for women to transition from the informal to the formal economy.

While focusing on written legislation, the report recognizes the often-large gaps between the laws on the books and actual practice: women do not always have access to the equality that formal laws establish. One reason for this may be poor implementation of legislation due to weak enforcement or design or low capacity.

Identifying legal differences is one step toward better understanding where women's economic rights may be restricted in practice. Of the countries covered by the report, only the Islamic Republic of Iran, Palau, Sudan, Tonga and the United States are not parties to the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.<sup>1</sup> Thus, most women in the economies covered should have access to formal equality. But, as the report shows, that is not the case in many economies.

Methodological strengths and limitations

The Women, Business and the Law methodology was designed to be an easily replicable way to benchmark the legal and regulatory environment for women as entrepreneurs and employees. This approach has advantages and limitations (table 2.2).

A key consideration for the project is that the indicators are comparable across economies. The indicators are based on standardized assumptions. One example of a standardized assumption used for maternity leave is that the woman in question is having one child. While maternity leave rules often differ for twins, only data for individual births is captured by the question.

Another assumption is the location of the woman in question is in the largest business city of the economy. However,

TABLE 2.2    METHODOLOGICAL STRENGTHS AND LIMITATIONS

Feature	Strengths	Limitations
Use of standardized assumptions	Makes data comparable across economies and methodology transparent	Reduces scope of data; only regulatory reforms in the areas measured can be systematically tracked
Focus on largest business city	Makes data collection manageable (cost effective) and data comparable	Reduces representativeness of data for an economy if there are significant differences across locations
Focus on the most populous group	Makes data comparable across economies, especially where there are parallel legal systems prescribing different rights for different groups of women	Restrictions that apply only to minority populations may be missed
Focus on the formal sector	Keeps attention on formal sector—where regulations are relevant	Unable to reflect reality for women in the informal sector—which may be a significant number of women in many economies
Focus on the law	Makes indicators “actionable” because the law is what policymakers can change	Where systematic compliance with the law is lacking, regulatory changes alone will not achieve the desired results research on how specific regulations affect women’s incentives to participate in economic activity. Moreover, the data set is updated every two years, making it possible to analyze variations over time.

How are the data collected?

The Women, Business and the Law data are based on domestic laws and regulations. The data cover small economies and some of the poorest economies, for which little or no data are available in other data sets. The new areas of coverage are based on consultations across the World Bank Group and with external experts, including international organizations, civil society organizations, academics and private sector actors.

The report’s indicators were constructed based on responses from practitioners with expertise in family, labor and criminal law, including lawyers, judges, academics and members of civil society organizations working on gender legislation may differ within federal economies, where laws affecting women can vary by state. Even in nonfederal economies, women in rural areas and small towns may face more restrictive local legislation.

In addition, where several sets of personal law<sup>2</sup> prescribe different rights and obligations for different groups of women, the data focus on the most populous group, which may mean that restrictions that apply only to minority populations are missed. A detailed explanation of the report’s methodology—including all the questions asked and assumptions made—is provided in the data notes.

Women, Business and the Law recognizes the limitations of standardized assumptions, but while such assumptions come at the expense of specificity, they also ensure data comparability.

The data set does not include qualitative assessments. Outcome variables, such as female labor force participation rates, also are not part of the data set, although they are used in the analysis for this report.

Rules and regulations are directly controlled by policy makers—and they are often where policy makers start when they set out to change the incentives that govern women’s economic lives. Women, Business and the Law not only shows where gender differences exist in the law, but it also points to specific laws that may lend themselves to reform. Its quantitative measures support issues. The data were collected through several rounds of interaction with these respondents—through responses to questionnaires, conference calls, written correspondence and visits by the team (figure 2.1). The data in this report are current as of June 1, 2017.

In addition to filling out written questionnaires, Women, Business and the Law respondents provide references to the relevant laws and regulations. The Women, Business and the Law team collects the relevant texts and checks the questionnaire responses for accuracy. All questionnaire responses are verified against codified sources of national law, including laws, statutes, rules, regulations and procedures, in areas such as labor, social security, civil procedure, tax, violence against women, marriage and family, inheritance and others. Doing Business 2018 surveys were also used to develop some questions in the building credit indicator.

Women, Business and the Law requires each legal data point to have a citable legal source, and sources for every data point are posted on the project website (<http://wbl.worldbank.org>) to ensure that the data are transparent. More detailed data on each economy, including links to the legal sources, are also provided on the Women, Business and the Law website. Feedback is welcome and can be offered through the website.

What's next?

During the two-year period between the publication of this report and the Women, Business and the Law 2020 report, the team will carry out a robust consultative process with a variety of stakeholders on the optimal design and construction of a gender equality index through which women's entrepreneurship and employment can be examined. The indicator-level scoring presented in this report is the first step in this process.

Notes

- 1 Palau and the United States have signed but not ratified the Convention.
- 2 Personal law refers to non-customary legal systems that stem from tradition or doctrinal texts, which are sometimes uncodified.

WOMEN'S FINANCIAL INCLUSION AND THE LAW

Discriminatory laws can affect women's demand for financial services and impede their ability to save, borrow, pay or insure themselves against risk.

In 2014 Madame Ngetsi wanted to formalize a small business that she was running in Kinshasa, the Democratic Republic of Congo. To do so, she would need to register her company and open a bank account. Along the way, she might need a loan to grow her business. But legally, Madame Ngetsi needed her husband's permission to do any of these activities under the family code that existed at the time.

This is just one example of how women's decision making is limited by laws interfering with their economic activities. Such laws can affect women's ability to save, borrow, pay or insure themselves against risk.

Discriminatory laws can affect women's demand for financial services. For example, limited access to and control over property constrain women's ability to provide collateral for loans. Similarly, gender differences in getting identification can make it more difficult for women to open bank accounts, especially where there are stringent identification requirements to do so.

Financial inclusion involves access to and usage of various financial services, such as savings, payments, credit and insurance from formal service providers. Basic financial inclusion can entail a simple deposit account at a bank or a transaction on a mobile money service account. It can also encompass loans from formal financial institutions or insurance products that allow people to manage their financial risks.

The World Bank Group's 2014 Global Findex database revealed that although almost all OECD high-income economies have universal access to financial services, only slightly more than half of developing economies do. Globally 61% of adults have an account at a financial institution. However, 2 billion people remain unbanked, of which more than half are women. When it comes to women's financial inclusion, a large gender gap in access to and usage of financial services persists.<sup>1</sup>

Identification matters for financial inclusion

Know Your Customer (KYC) requirements oblige financial institutions to verify a customer's identity by checking and confirming identification. Such rules are an important part of anti-money laundering and countering the financing of terrorism regimes, and help preserve the integrity of financial markets. However, they can sometimes exclude segments of the population who are more likely to lack identification—such as low-income populations or women. A survey conducted by the Alliance for Financial Inclusion reports that 25% of the respondents perceived KYC requirements as a barrier to women.<sup>2</sup>

Gender inequality can play a role in making access to identification more burdensome for women, as some laws and regulations make it more difficult for women to obtain a national identity (ID) card or passport or register the birth of a child in the same way as men (box 3.1). Women, Business and the Law data show there are at least 48 legal differences for women compared with men when applying for an ID or passport in the economies examined.

Specifically, married women cannot get an ID card in the same way as married men in 11 economies (concentrated in South Asia, the Middle East and North Africa and Sub-Saharan Africa). In Pakistan, for example, a married woman must provide her marriage contract and her husband's ID card or an electronic confirmation by her husband when renewing her national ID card.

However, change is occurring. In 2016, Senegal reformed regulations imposing additional requirements on married women when applying for ID cards. The new regulations no longer require married women's ID cards to include their husband's name. Consequently, a wife no longer must provide supporting documentation to establish her husband's name, and procedures are now the same for men and women.

Tiered KYC requirements are a promising solution to help women with limited proof of identity and other necessary documentation, such as proof of address and source of income, open basic savings and payment accounts. Tiered KYC regimes use a risk-based approach where the requirements are less stringent for low-value or simplified bank accounts that can have a balance cap or carry transaction and access restrictions. A high level of due diligence is not necessarily appropriate and economic for these small accounts.<sup>3</sup> Instead, knowledge of the customer's identity (customer identification and verification) and the ability to track transactions are often sufficient.

Under this framework, more relaxed, small-value accounts are the ideal tool to allow access to financial services to new (low-income) customers. Several economies, including Ghana and Tanzania, have implemented a tier-based approach for KYC rules.

The use of innovative and secure means of identification, such as biometric IDs, yield specific benefits for women, allowing them to overcome distribution barriers for national IDs and facilitating the delivery of digital financial services. A biometric ID is an identity card containing

BOX 3.1 REGISTERING A BIRTH

Having a birth certificate—and the registration that precedes it—is foundational. Birth certificates are the first step toward a legal identity and are required to obtain passports, ID cards, marriage certificates and driver's licenses. Birth certificates may also be needed to obtain family allowances, social security and insurance, enroll children in school and access credit and pensions.

However, in some economies, mothers cannot register the birth of a child in the same way as fathers. In Greece, the father is legally obligated to register the child; the mother needs a special mandate by a notary attorney to do so. In Barbados, Fiji and Namibia, a mother can legally register the newborn only when the father is dead, absent or incapable. And in The Gambia, the father is legally required to register children born within a marriage, and the mother has this legal responsibility for children born outside marriage.

Most economies require a parent to show notification of a live birth, issued by the hospital, and some form of personal identification. Economies without robust civil identification systems often allow proof of identity through witnesses, such as village elders, teachers or religious leaders. In El Salvador and Senegal, for example, two witnesses with an identity document can attest for the registration when the parents lack documentation. By contrast, Morocco requires extensive documentation, including a copy of the mother's birth certificate, family book and records of the child's first vaccinations.

Unmarried parents must overcome significant hurdles where the system does not recognize children born outside marriage—as is the case in Bahrain and Nepal—or requires additional procedures for registering their birth, as in Iraq, Jordan and Morocco, where an unmarried parent must obtain a court order to register their child.

Birth registration and birth certificates should be free, to encourage parents to register their children and get a certificate. However, some economies, such as Lebanon, Pakistan and Tajikistan, charge for registering births.

Other economies do not charge for registering births, but do charge for the birth certificates, including Australia, Barbados, Côte d'Ivoire, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Malawi, the Philippines, Rwanda, Senegal and Togo.

Although many economies are moving toward eliminating costs for birth registration within the required timeframe (which can range from 10 days to 1 year), some still charge for late registration. For example, in Kenya, birth registration is free if done within 6 months, but a fee is charged after that. The aim is to encourage early registration. However, the fee can deter parents from registering births at all. Other economies that charge for birth registration after the required timeframe include Angola, El Salvador, Ghana, Jamaica, Lesotho, Sri Lanka, Tajikistan and Vietnam.

No additional documentation should be necessary to register a child after the required timeframe. But in Burkina Faso a judgment is needed to register a child after the time limit of 2 months and in Lebanon, after 1 year. Meanwhile, in 2013 Indonesia's Constitutional Court removed a requirement that the General Courts must provide a statement to get a birth certificate for a child over age 1.

biometric information, such as fingerprints and facial patterns, which can be easily and quickly verified online.

In India, until recently, banks had to perform KYC processes each time a financial interaction occurred, even if the same customer wanted to open two accounts at the same bank. Now, a photograph and fingerprint or signature are sufficient documentation to open a restricted bank account, if the holder applies within a year for Aadhar, a unique registration number issued by the national ID program. This number is replacing the myriad identification cards that were utilized earlier for different purposes. Banks and other institutions can easily access the Aadhar database for their KYC procedures.<sup>4</sup>

Laws restricting women’s agency and mobility can hinder their financial inclusion

Laws can limit women’s legal capacity through requiring permission—usually from a husband—to carry out everyday activities. This can constrain women’s financial inclusion. Women, Business and the Law data show that in 31 economies, the husband is legally considered head of household, which can have implications ranging from government land allocation to who receives government benefits within a household.

At a more basic level, Chad, Guinea-Bissau and Niger are now the only economies where married women still need permission to open a bank account. In Equatorial Guinea, a wife still needs her husband’s permission to sign a contract.

Legal restrictions can limit women’s mobility and decision making. In 31 economies, married women cannot choose where to live in the same way as married men. In 18 economies, they cannot work outside the home in the same way as a married man. And in 17 economies, married women cannot travel outside the home in the same way as married men (Afghanistan, Bahrain, Brunei Darussalam, the Arab Republic of Egypt, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Malaysia, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Syria, the United Arab Emirates, West Bank and Gaza and the Republic of Yemen). Where this is the case, women may have difficulties traveling to banks or other service providers and may not be able to earn an independent income or live in a place that offers the opportunity to work or access services.

Laws restricting women’s economic independence also restrict their access and usage of financial services. For example, where married women are prohibited from working, women are less likely to have accounts, formal credit or savings. Where women can be head of household or women are not required by law to obey their husbands, women are more likely to use formal financial products.<sup>5</sup>

Where married women cannot choose where to live in the same way as men, gender gaps in financial inclusion are higher for women’s access to bank accounts and their capacity to borrow from a financial institution (figure 3.1).

These statistical relationships should not be interpreted as causal.

Barriers to women’s access and control over property can affect their financial inclusion

Evidence suggests that gender differences in asset ownership are an influential factor affecting women’s ability to access credit. Limited access to assets is also a major reason why women are rejected for loans, as banks can be reluctant to lend to customers who lack traditional collateral.<sup>6</sup>

Family, inheritance and land laws are important in allocating assets between men and women. These laws come into play at different stages of a woman’s life-cycle, determining what a daughter will inherit from her parents and what assets a woman can access during her marriage and as a divorcee or widow. Where these laws are favorable, women have greater economic independence.<sup>7</sup>

Most economies establish a default marital property regime determining the allocation of assets between spouses. Common options are full or partial community property regimes or separate property regimes. In full community property regimes, the property of either spouse acquired before and during marriage is treated as joint property regardless of who paid for it. In partial community property regimes assets acquired before marriage are regarded as the separate property of the acquiring spouse and assets acquired after marriage are regarded as the couple’s joint property. In separate property regimes, each spouse retains ownership and control over property they paid for. Women, Business and the Law data shows that 6 economies have a default full community property regime; 77 economies have a default partial community property regime; and 75 have a default separate property regime.

A study on gender asset and wealth gaps in Ecuador, Ghana and the Indian state of Karnataka used household asset surveys to estimate married women’s share of couples’ wealth. It found that in Ecuador married women owned 44% of couples’ wealth; in Ghana they owned 19%; and in Karnataka they owned 9%. The much larger share of couples’ wealth held by married women in Ecuador was explained by the country’s partial community property regime, where most assets are owned jointly by wives and husbands. Married women’s smaller share of couples’ wealth in Ghana and Karnataka was largely explained by their separation of property regimes, where assets are not jointly owned.<sup>8</sup>

Although separate property regimes are gender neutral, they can penalize women who do not build up an income during marriage. This effect can be mitigated in divorce by the legal recognition of nonmonetary contributions such as unpaid care. The recognition of nonmonetary contributions within separate property regimes may also make a difference to women’s financial inclusion. Gender gaps in women having a debit card and using it are larger in separate property regimes that do not recognize nonmonetary contributions than in those that do (figure 3.2).

In Morocco and Tunisia, the default marital property regime is separation of property. Both economies have introduced an option of partial community property in reforms to the family law—Morocco in 2004 and Tunisia in 1998. However,

FIGURE 3.2 GAPS ARE SMALLER IN ACCESS TO AND USE OF DEBIT CARDS WHERE WOMEN’S NONMONETARY CONTRIBUTIONS ARE RECOGNIZED IN SEPARATE PROPERTY REGIMES

Sources: Women, Business and the Law and Global Findex (2014) databases.

Note: The differences in the percentages illustrated for females (% age 15+) are statistically significant at least at the 5% level after accounting for the log of GNI per capita (2015), domestic credit to private sector (% of GDP), financial system deposits to GDP (%), and the rule of law (2016). These statistical relationships should not be interpreted as causal.

uptake has been low partly due to lack of awareness, social norms and complex procedures.<sup>9</sup> The World Bank's World Development Report 2015 highlights how changing a default option can change norms, such as those around employees' adoption of pension plans. Making enrollment in a pension plan the default option—so that employees must choose to opt out—is a way to ensure that most employees end up being covered.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, making a partial community property regime the default option could increase uptake.

Likewise, the recognition of women's unpaid work—through recognizing non-monetary contributions—should be a default setting, whether through a joint property regime or by adding specific laws on nonmonetary contributions to separate property regimes.

Removing the husband's sole control over property is also critical. The reform of the family code in Ethiopia, which did away with the husband's sole control over marital property and the need for his permission to work outside the home, was linked to more women working in full-time jobs outside the home and in more productive sectors.<sup>11</sup>

Unequal inheritance rights are also a barrier to women's financial inclusion

Access to assets through inheritance is also important for women and girls. Widows may depend on inheritance for financial security, and daughters may become more economically independent and have greater educational opportunities if they are allowed equal inheritance rights with sons.

In 36 of the 189 economies covered by Women, Business and the Law, widows do not have the same inheritance rights as widowers. And 39 of the 189 economies measured prevent daughters from inheriting in the same way as sons.

Improving women's inheritance rights can lead to better outcomes. One study in India found improved inheritance rights led to a greater likelihood of women having bank accounts.<sup>12</sup> Women are also more likely to have housing finance where inheritance rights are equal for widows and daughters (figure 3.3). One possible explanation for this is women may have fewer assets to use as collateral where inheritance rights are unequal.

It is also important to look at how accounts transfer when the account holder dies. In Kenya, for example, it is difficult for widows to get access to their deceased husband's bank account. Safaricom's policy on M-Pesa and M-Shwari accounts provides that account balances stay in the deceased's account until they are claimed. But wives cannot automatically claim their husband's account money. The policy requires that when an M-Pesa subscriber dies with a will, the next of kin must present copies of the death certificate, ID and grant of probate to Safaricom. If an M-Pesa subscriber dies without a will, the next of kin must also present letters of administration.<sup>13</sup> If no one claims the money within two years, it is transferred to the Unclaimed Financial Assets Authority, a government institution. In 2015, Safaricom handed over $4.8 million to the Unclaimed Financial Assets Authority.<sup>14</sup>

Allowing a husband to name his wife as a beneficiary at the time the account is established can sidestep these procedures and make a difference for widows.

Lack of credit histories can hinder women's access to finance

Access to formal credit relies heavily on asset-based lending, but where women have limited access to property they are less likely to use it as collateral. Information-sharing institutions, such as credit bureaus and registries, are important determinants of private credit development.<sup>15</sup> Where they collect the types of reputation collateral that women are more likely to have, such as a record of successful repayments to microfinance institutions or retailers, this may help women build their credit histories and ultimately access finance.

But in many developing economies, credit bureaus and registries are uncommon. Where they do exist, they may limit themselves to covering high loan amounts that preclude the vast number of female borrowers who have smaller loans. Among the 189 economies covered by Women, Business and the Law, 50 do not have a public credit registry or private credit bureau that covers more than 5% of the adult population.

Women, Business and the Law data show that microfinance repayment data are collected and distributed by credit bureaus and registries in 83 economies, with 75 of these sharing positive credit information such as on-time payments and the amounts of loans—allowing microfinance borrowers to leverage successful repayment histories to build reputation collateral (figure 3.4).

Bureaus and registries in 57 economies share retail payment data, with 43 sharing positive credit information. For utility repayment data, the total is 60 economies, of which 41 require the provision of positive credit information. In a minority of economies, 23 of the 189, all three institutions (microfinance institutions, retailers and utility companies) provide positive credit repayment data to credit agencies.

Women’s leadership is limited in the banking sector and decision-making bodies

Recent studies show how female participation in the banking sector and decision-making bodies can have a positive impact on financial inclusion. For example, access to the internet and mobile phones and financial inclusion are especially linked to the presence of women in leadership roles.<sup>16</sup> Studies on female leadership in other decision-making bodies have shown impacts on issues affecting women. For example, female representation in national parliaments at levels of 25% and above makes it more likely for discriminatory property laws to be reformed in the next 5 years compared with 15 years before such levels of representation.<sup>17</sup>

When it comes to corporate boards, some research links gender diversity to better company performance, including in areas such as greater returns on sales and assets.<sup>18</sup> Women, Business and the Law data show that 11 economies have legal quotas for women on corporate boards (Belgium, France, Germany, Iceland, India, Israel, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway and Spain), with the most recent addition being the United Arab Emirates which introduced a quota of 20% for publicly listed companies in 2016.

A 2016 study across 26 OECD countries shows the evolution in the number of female board members of central banks.<sup>19</sup> As of January 2016, women represented only 14% of board members. Forty-two percent of the central banks covered had no women on their board. This level has remained constant since 2003. Comparable findings emerge from a 2017 study analyzing central bank boards, with a broader sample of 112 countries from different income groups.<sup>20</sup> Women represent only 15% of the board members in these countries. Thirty percent have no female board members, and 48% have less than 10%. Another 2017 study shows that since 1950, only 56 women have chaired a central bank.<sup>21</sup> In 2015 only 16 women (8.7%) chaired a central bank, of a total of 184 worldwide.

Women are also underrepresented at senior levels in the financial sector overall. Recent data gathered from 50 of the largest banks, insurers, asset managers and professional services firms show that only 25% of top executives are female.<sup>22</sup>

The way forward

It is important to make the links between women’s financial inclusion and the legal environment as early as possible. Consider the example of Madame Ngetsi in the Democratic Republic of Congo. The good news is she can now open a bank account, get a loan, sign a contract, register her business and register land without any need for her husband's permission, following reforms to the family code in 2016.

But there is still work to be done. Husbands still control marital property and they are still legally the head of household. Prevailing social norms did not allow for a complete overhaul of barriers to women's financial inclusion, but rather incremental steps. This is often the pattern of legal reform, even in high-income economies. Married women in France gained equal rights to work outside the home in 1965, become head of household in 1970, and administer property in 1985.

Legal reform is a crucial element that needs to be embedded in broader strategies to advance women's financial inclusion. According to surveyed members of the Alliance for Financial Inclusion, the main barriers identified for women are financial literacy (75%), collateral requirements (66%) and the sociocultural environment.<sup>23</sup> Regulatory requirements can prevent women from accessing financial services. Consequently, some economies, such as Paraguay, have chosen to include an assessment of the legal and regulatory framework in their national financial inclusion strategy.<sup>24</sup>

More research is needed on many related issues, such as how labor laws, the gender wage gap or childcare can affect women's access to and use of financial services. Digital financial services have the potential to close gender gaps but may still be hindered by the same basic constraints: women's lack of assets and legal autonomy can prevent women from reaping all the benefits that technology can offer. Understanding and tackling these legal constraints should be part of an overall strategy to accelerate women's financial inclusion. Data on gender-differentiated laws can help identify the gaps and monitor progress in closing these gaps over time.

SUMMARIES OF WOMEN, BUSINESS AND THE LAW REFORMS

In the two-year period from May 1, 2015 through June 1, 2017, Women, Business and the Law recorded 87 regulatory reforms towards gender equality in employment and entrepreneurial activity in scored areas, with 65 economies implementing at least one reform moving towards gender equality.

- + Reform increasing gender parity
- Reform neutral to gender parity
- ✗ Reform decreasing gender parity

Afghanistan

- + Protecting women from violence
Afghanistan now prohibits sexual harassment in employment and education. It also established criminal penalties and civil remedies for sexual harassment in employment.

Albania

- + Getting a job
Albania introduced 3 days of paid paternity leave. The new labor code also mandates equal remuneration for men and women who do work of equal value.
- + Providing incentives to work
Albania's new labor code also guarantees that after maternity leave, employees can return to their job or to an equivalent job on terms that are no less favorable than before the leave.

Algeria

- + Protecting women from violence
Algeria criminalized domestic violence, including physical, psychological and economic violence.

Angola

- ✗ Getting a job
Angola increased the number of legal restrictions on women's work.
- + Building credit
Additionally, Angola now prohibits discrimination by creditors in financial transactions based on gender.

Azerbaijan

- + Getting a job
Azerbaijan is gradually increasing and equalizing the ages at which men and women can retire and receive pension benefits.

Bahrain

- + Protecting women from violence
Bahrain introduced its first domestic violence law, which protects spouses and family members and covers physical, sexual, psychological and economic violence.

Bangladesh

- ✗ Getting a job
Bangladesh now prohibits women from carrying, lifting or removing weighty goods and instruments. It also establishes different weight-lifting thresholds for men and women.

Bhutan

- + Providing incentives to work
Bhutan increased the maximum amount of educational expenses that can be deducted from income taxes.
- + Building credit
Bhutan improved access to credit information by distributing positive and negative payment data from utility companies.

Bolivia

- + Building credit
Bolivia enhanced access to credit information by starting to report data from utility companies.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

- + Getting a job
Bosnia and Herzegovina eliminated several restrictions on women's employment, including in jobs deemed arduous, jobs deemed hazardous and underwater work. It also eliminated the possibility for men and women to retire early and receive partial pension benefits, which was previously unequal.
- + Going to court
Bosnia and Herzegovina adopted the Law on Free Legal Aid in 2016 to provide legal assistance in civil procedures.

Botswana

+ Building credit

Botswana improved access to credit information by beginning to distribute data from utility companies, including positive and negative data.

Brunei Darussalam

+ Building credit

Brunei Darussalam improved access to credit information by distributing data from two utility companies.

Bulgaria

+ ✘ Getting a job

Bulgaria removed all restrictions on women's employment. It is also gradually increasing and equalizing the ages at which men and women can retire with full pension benefits.

However, the ages at which men and women can retire with partial pension benefits are now unequal.

Burundi

+ Protecting women from violence

Burundi introduced civil remedies for sexual harassment in employment.

Cameroon

+ Protecting women from violence

Cameroon adopted a new criminal code that covers sexual harassment in employment and education, and established criminal penalties for sexual harassment.

Chad

+ Protecting women from violence

Chad adopted a new criminal code that aggravates penalties for domestic violence and criminalizes sexual harassment in employment.

China

+ Getting a job

China introduced 3 days of paid paternity leave. It also now entitles all women—regardless of age—to 128 days of paid maternity leave. Previously, women younger than age 25 were entitled to 98 days of maternity leave, whereas women older than age 25 were entitled to 128 days.

+ Building credit

China improved access to credit information by reporting payment histories from utility companies, including positive and negative data.

Colombia

+ Getting a job

Colombia increased paid maternity leave from 98 to 126 days. It also removed restrictions on women's employment in mining and jobs deemed hazardous and arduous.

Congo, Dem. Rep.

+ Accessing institutions

The Democratic Republic of Congo reformed its family code to allow married women to sign a contract, get a job, open a bank account and register a business in the same way as married men. It also removed the obligation for a married woman to obey her husband and allows spouses to choose the marital home mutually.

+ Getting a job

The Democratic Republic of Congo lifted restrictions on women's ability to work at night in public or private industrial establishments. It also now mandates nondiscrimination based on gender in various aspects of employment, including hiring and promotions.

+ Building credit

The Democratic Republic of Congo now prohibits discrimination based on gender in access to credit.

Côte d'Ivoire

+ Providing incentives to work

Côte d'Ivoire made primary school compulsory for all children ages 6–16 years.

+ Going to court

Côte d'Ivoire also established a small claims procedure in 2015, and raised the maximum amount for small claims in 2017.

Dominican Republic

+ Getting a job

The Dominican Republic increased the length of paid maternity leave from 84 to 98 days.

Ecuador

+ Using property

Ecuador equalized men's and women's property rights by repealing the provision favoring husbands' decisions in cases of disagreement between spouses when administering assets during marriage.

✘ Going to court

A new code of civil procedure eliminated small claims procedures in Ecuador.

El Salvador

+ Getting a job

El Salvador increased the length of paid maternity leave from 84 to 112 days.

Ethiopia

+ Going to court

Ethiopia now requires the Attorney General to provide free legal aid services to women and others who lack the financial capacity to institute civil actions in federal court.

Fiji

✘ Building credit

The credit bureau in Fiji suspended operations and no longer reports data from utilities and retailers, therefore decreasing access to credit.

Guinea

+ Building credit

Guinea prohibited discrimination based on gender and marital status when accessing goods and services, including financial services.

+ Protecting women from violence

Guinea criminalized sexual harassment, including in the workplace.

Guyana

+ Building credit

Guyana improved access to credit information by expanding the credit bureau's coverage so that it now covers more than 5% of the population. It reports data from utility companies and retailers.

Honduras

○ Using property

Partial community is now the default marital property regime in Honduras. Both spouses must agree when administering property during marriage.

Hungary

✘ Going to court

Hungary eliminated small claims courts and procedures; ordinary procedures now apply in the lowest courts.

Iceland

+ Building credit

Iceland enhanced access to credit information by starting to report data from utility companies. It also prohibited discrimination based on gender when accessing goods and services, including financial services.

India

+ ✘ Getting a job

India increased the length of paid maternity leave from 84 to 182 days.

But as employers pay the full cost of maternity leave, the cost of hiring women of childbearing age has increased from the employer's perspective.

Indonesia

+ Going to court

Indonesia established a small claims procedure in 2015.

Iran, Islamic Rep.

+ Building credit

The Islamic Republic of Iran improved access to credit information by reporting data on credit payments from an automobile retailer.

Iraq

+ Accessing institutions

Iraq enacted a new passport law in 2015 that introduces electronic passports. The application process is now the same for men and women and does not require women to bring a guardian.

+ ✘ Getting a job

Iraq increased the length of paid maternity leave from 72 to 98 days. Further, its new labor code prohibits discrimination based on gender in various aspects of employment, including hiring and dismissal.

However, the new labor code allows employers to terminate employees' contracts when they reach the retirement age, which is unequal for men and women.

+ Providing incentives to work

Iraq now guarantees workers returning from maternity leave the same position or a similar position with the same wage.

+ Protecting women from violence

Iraq enacted a new labor code that specifically addresses and criminalizes sexual harassment in employment.

Ireland

+ Getting a job

Ireland introduced 10 days of paid paternity leave.

Israel

+ Getting a job

Israel increased the length of paid maternity leave from 98 to 105 days, and now allows the mother to transfer one week of maternity leave to the father.

Italy

+ Getting a job

Italy increased paid paternity leave from 1 to 2 days.

Kenya

+ Going to court

Kenya's new Legal Aid Act provides legal aid services in civil matters.

+ Building credit

Kenya improved access to credit information by distributing data from two utility companies that report positive and negative payment information.

+ Protecting women from violence

Kenya enacted its first domestic violence law, which protects family members, spouses and former spouses and partners (including non-cohabiting partners) from physical, sexual, psychological and economic abuse.

Kiribati

+ Getting a job

Kiribati's new labor code lifted all restrictions on women's employment, including restrictions on working at night and in mining.

+ Providing incentives to work

It also guarantees employees returning from maternity leave the same or an equivalent position.

Kosovo

+ Going to court

Kosovo established an anti-discrimination commission that allows women to submit complaints of discrimination to an Ombudsperson.

+ Building credit

Kosovo also enacted a new nondiscrimination law in 2015, which introduced marital status as a category protected from discrimination when accessing credit.

Latvia

+ Building credit

Latvia improved access to credit information by launching a private credit bureau. It reports payment data from utility companies and retailers.

Lesotho

+ Building credit

Lesotho expanded the credit bureau's coverage to include more than 5% of the population. The bureau reports data from both utility companies and retailers.

Liberia

+ Getting a job

Liberia increased the length of paid maternity leave from 90 to 98 days. Further, the new labor code mandates equal remuneration for work of equal value, as well as prohibits discrimination based on gender in various aspects of employment, including hiring, promotions and dismissal.

+ Providing incentives to work

Liberia's new labor code also guarantees employees returning from maternity leave an equivalent position.

Lithuania

+ Protecting women from violence

Lithuania prohibited sexual harassment in education and established civil remedies for sexual harassment in the workplace.

Luxembourg

+ Getting a job

Luxembourg increased the percentage of wages received during parental leave from 77% to 100%.

Macedonia, FYR

+ Building credit

The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia improved access to credit information by beginning to distribute data from retailers, including positive and negative data.

Malawi

+ Building credit

Malawi improved access to credit information by establishing a new credit bureau that reports data collected from utility companies.

Malaysia

+ Protecting women from violence

Malaysia now allows victims of sexual harassment to seek civil remedies.

Maldives

+ Building credit

Maldives prohibited discrimination based on gender and marital status when accessing financial services.

Marshall Islands

+ Going to court

Established in 2015, the Human Rights Committee of the Marshall Islands receives complaints of discrimination based on gender.

Mauritius

+ Getting a job

Mauritius increased the length of maternity leave from 84 to 98 days.

Moldova

+ Getting a job

Moldova introduced 10 days of paid paternity leave. It is also gradually increasing and equalizing the ages at which men and women can retire and receive full pension benefits.

Mongolia

+ Getting a job

Mongolia is gradually increasing and equalizing the ages at which men and women can retire and receive pension benefits.

Namibia

+ Building credit

Namibia enhanced access to credit information by starting to report data from utility companies.

New Zealand

+ Getting a job

New Zealand replaced maternity leave with parental leave and increased it from 112 to 126 days.

Nigeria

+ Building credit

Nigeria improved access to credit information by beginning to distribute data from utility companies, including positive and negative data.

Panama

+ Getting a job

Panama introduced 3 days of paid paternity leave.

Paraguay

+ Getting a job

Paraguay increased the length of paid maternity leave from 63 to 98 days and the percentage of wages received during maternity leave from 50% to 75%. It also increased the length of paid paternity leave from 2 to 10 days.

Peru

+ Getting a job

Peru increased the length of paid maternity leave from 90 to 98 days.

Poland

+ ✘ Getting a job

Poland replaced 42 days of paid maternity leave with paid parental leave. It also eliminated all restrictions on women's employment.

However, it reversed a 2012 law that was gradually increasing and equalizing the retirement ages for men and women. Now, the retirement age is set to be lowered back to 60 years for women and 65 for men.

Portugal

+ Getting a job

Portugal increased the length of paid paternity leave from 20 to 25 days.

Rwanda

+ Accessing institutions

Rwanda granted both spouses equal rights to choose the marital home. It also removed the provision designating the husband as "head of household."

+ Getting a job

Rwanda increased the percentage of wages received during maternity leave from 60% to 100%. Additionally, the employer and government now share the cost of maternity benefits, whereas previously the employer was solely responsible.

Senegal

+ Accessing institutions

Senegal enacted a new national identity card law in 2016, introducing biometric cards. The application process is now equal for men and women.

Seychelles

+ Getting a job

The Seychelles introduced 5 days of paid paternity leave.

Singapore

+ Getting a job

Singapore increased the length of paid paternity leave from 5 to 10 days.

Slovak Republic

+ Getting a job

The Slovak Republic increased the percentage of wages received during maternity leave from 65% to 75%.

Slovenia

+ Protecting women from violence

Slovenia prohibited sexual harassment in education.

South Africa

+ Getting a job

South Africa increased the percentage of wages received during maternity leave from 60% to 66%.

Spain

+ Getting a job

Spain increased the length of paid paternity leave from 15 to 30 days.

St. Vincent and the Grenadines

+ ✘ Getting a job

St. Vincent and the Grenadines increased the percentage of wages received during maternity leave from 75% to 87%.

But as employers pay for maternity leave, the cost of hiring women of childbearing age has increased from the employer's perspective.

Sweden

+ Getting a job

Sweden increased the allocation of parental leave for mothers and fathers from 60 to 90 days.

Taiwan, China

+ Providing incentives to work

Taiwan, China's legislation on early childhood education now applies to children ages two and older. Previously, children ages four and older were covered.

+ Building credit

Taiwan, China enhanced access to credit information by starting to report data from retailers, including positive and negative data.

Tajikistan

+ Getting a job

Tajikistan abolished the general restriction on women's ability to work at night.

Tanzania

- + Providing incentives to work
Tanzania made primary education free and compulsory.
- + Going to court
The Legal Aid Act of 2017 mandates legal aid for indigent persons in civil proceedings in Tanzania.
- + Building credit
Tanzania improved access to credit information by distributing data from retailers.

Timor-Leste

- + Getting a job
Timor-Leste introduced a social security system that provides maternity benefits.

Tunisia

- + Building credit
Tunisia strengthened credit reporting by distributing payment information from a telecommunications company.

Turkey

- + Getting a job
Turkey introduced part-time work options for parents until their child's compulsory schooling begins. It also prohibited discrimination based on gender in several aspects of employment, such as promotions.
- + Going to court
Turkey's 2016 law establishing the Human Rights and Equality Institution allows victims to submit complaints about gender discrimination.

Vietnam

- + Getting a job
Vietnam introduced 5 days of paid paternity leave provided by the government.

- + Going to court
The Gender Equity and Equality Act also established the Gender Equality Commission in Zambia.
- + Building credit
Zambia now prohibits discrimination based on gender and marital status in access to credit.
- + Protecting women from violence
Zambia established civil remedies for sexual harassment in employment.

DATA NOTES

For the first time, Women, Business and the Law includes a scoring of 50 questions.

Women, Business and the Law monitors laws and regulations affecting women's ability to be entrepreneurs and employees. Legislation in various areas of the law can directly and indirectly affect women's economic potential.

Accordingly, Women, Business and the Law captures laws that directly differentiate between men and women, as well as laws that indirectly have a greater impact on women's ability to earn an income, start a business or get a job. Women, Business and the Law worked with local experts in each of the 189 covered economies to determine the sources of gender differentiation in the law. The information that local experts provided was checked for accuracy through a rigorous review process. Each answer was cross-verified with primary legal sources, resulting in revision or expansion of the information collected. The data in this report are current as of June 1, 2017.

With regard to women's rights, different economies reflect different cultural norms and values in their legislation. Although progress has been made toward gender parity, restrictions that limit women's economic prospects remain. This report provides objective, easily comparable data to inform dialogue about women's economic rights and opportunities. The methodology was designed to benchmark the legal and regulatory environment for women as entrepreneurs and employees.

Women, Business and the Law provides comparable data across 189 economies, covering the following seven indicators:

- Accessing institutions explores women's ability to interact with public authorities and the private sector in the same ways as men, through examining constraints on women's legal capacity.

- Using property analyzes women's ability to access and use property based on their ability to own, manage, control and inherit it. It also examines whether legislation accounts for nonmonetary contributions, such as unpaid care for children or the elderly, in distributing assets upon the dissolution of marriage.
- Getting a job assesses restrictions on women's ability to work, such as prohibitions on working at night or in certain industries. It also covers laws on maternity, paternity and parental leave, retirement ages, equal remuneration for work of equal value, nondiscrimination at work and flexible work options.
- Providing incentives to work examines childcare and tax support, through assessing tax deductions and credits, childcare and primary education.
- Going to court explores women's ability to access justice through examining the evidentiary weight of women's testimony, the existence of justice institutions such as anti-discrimination commissions and small claims courts and mandates for legal aid.
- Building credit examines credit bureaus and registries that collect information from retailers and utility companies. It also covers nondiscrimination in access to credit based on gender and marital status.

- Protecting women from violence considers laws on domestic violence and sexual harassment in education and employment.

Economy characteristics and coverage

The economies covered in this report are listed in table 5.1. Box 5.1 explains the economy characteristics such as regions and income groups.

Women, Business and the Law uses formal laws as a starting point for analysis and the report's indicators were constructed using responses from expert country practitioners in family law, labor law and criminal law, including lawyers, judges, academics and members of civil society organizations working on gender issues. The data were collected through several rounds of interaction with these

BOX 5.1 ECONOMY CHARACTERISTICS

Gross national income per capita

Women, Business and the Law 2018 reports 2016 incomes per capita as published in the World Bank's World Development Indicators 2017. For cost indicators expressed as a percentage of incomes per capita, 2016 gross national income (GNI) Atlas method in current U.S. dollars is used as denominator. GNI data based on the Atlas method were not available for Bahrain; Brunei Darussalam; Djibouti; Eritrea; the Islamic Republic of Iran; Kuwait; Libya; Myanmar; Oman; Papua New Guinea; Puerto Rico (U.S.); Qatar; San Marino; South Sudan; the Syrian Arab Republic; Taiwan, China; Timor-Leste; Vanuatu; and República Bolivariana de Venezuela. In these cases, gross domestic product or gross national product per capita data and growth rates from other sources, such as the International Monetary Fund's World Economic Outlook database and the Economist Intelligence Unit, were used.

Region and income group

Women, Business and the Law uses the World Bank regional and income group classifications, available at <http://datahelpdesk.worldbank.org/knowledgebase/articles/906519>. Although the World Bank does not assign regional classifications to high-income economies, the regional averages presented in the figures and tables in the Women, Business and the Law report include economies from all income groups (low, lower middle, upper middle and high income), although high-income OECD economies are assigned the "regional" classification of OECD high income.

Female population and labor force participation

Women, Business and the Law 2018 reports midyear 2016 female population data as published in the World Bank's World Development Indicators 2017. The publication was also used to obtain data on the female labor force as a percentage of the total labor force aged 15+.

respondents—through responses to standardized questionnaires, conference calls, written correspondence and visits by the team.

In addition to filling out written questionnaires, Women, Business and the Law respondents provided references to relevant laws and regulations. The Women, Business and the Law team collects the texts of relevant laws and regulations and checks questionnaire responses for accuracy. Questionnaire responses are verified against codified sources of national law, including constitutions, marriage and family codes, labor laws, passport procedures, inheritance statutes, tax regulations, gender equality laws, civil procedure rules, social security codes, criminal laws and laws on violence against women. Additionally, Doing Business 2018 surveys were used to develop some of the questions for the building credit and providing incentives to work indicators.

Women, Business and the Law requires each legal data point to have a specific citable legal source; the legal source is provided for every data point on the project website (<http://wbl.worldbank.org>) to ensure transparency of the data. More detailed data on each economy, including links to the legal sources used, are also provided on the project website.

The report team welcomes feedback on the methodology and construction of this set of indicators. We look forward to improving its coverage and scope. Feedback is welcome on all aspects of the report and can be offered through the Women, Business and the Law website.

The Women, Business and the Law methodology has several useful characteristics:

- It is transparent and uses information derived directly from laws and regulations.
- Because standard assumptions are used when collecting the data, comparisons are valid across economies.

- The data identify potential obstacles to women in business and legislation that can be changed because of this new information.

Although Women, Business and the Law focuses on written legislation, there is often a large gap between laws on the books and actual practices. Women do not always have access to the equality they are legally entitled to. This project attempts to identify areas in which formal legal differentiation still exists and then clarify the impacts of these legal differences on women.

In Women, Business and the Law 2018, three new scored questions were added across two of the seven indicators. The new questions are footnoted throughout the text. Any methodological changes made are described in the summary of methodology changes section of the Data Notes. For more information about the full set of data collected this cycle, please visit our website at <http://wbl.worldbank.org>.

The sections below provide detailed explanations of the methodology used to answer the 50 scored questions asked across 189 economies for a total of 9,450 data points.

The project has data available for an additional 116 questions which are not scored, for a total of 21,924 data points. Unscored questions fall into three categories. First, some questions constitute component parts of scored questions. For example, to understand if there is paid leave available to women of at least 14 weeks, Women, Business and the Law must first understand if the law mandates maternity leave or parental leave. And then it must understand how many days such maternity leave or parental leave is paid for. Second, some questions do not directly relate to women's entrepreneurship or employment, although they are important for gender equality. For example, the series of questions on protection orders fall into this category. And third, some questions are important to understand the legal framework, but do not in and of themselves, denote a good practice. For example, questions on the nature of the marital property regimes. Detailed information on all unscored questions is available on the project website at <http://wbl.worldbank.org>.

The following section focuses on the 50 scored questions, which are grouped by indicator. Each question is followed by information on how the answers were standardized and made comparable across all economies, as well as on how the questions are scored. Assumptions, where used, are also listed. The indicator scores (a number between 0 and 100, 100 being the best) are obtained by calculating the unweighted average of the scored questions in that indicator, and scaling the result to 100.

Accessing institutions

Assumptions

It is assumed that the woman

- Resides in the main business city of the economy being examined.
- Has reached the legal age of majority and is capable of making decisions as an adult; if there is no legal age of majority, the woman is assumed to be 30 years old.
- Is sane, competent, in good health and has no criminal record.
- Is a lawful citizen of the economy examined.
- Where the question assumes the woman or man is married, the marriage is monogamous and registered with the authorities.
- Where the question assumes the woman or man is unmarried, she or he has never been married.
- Where the answer differs according to the legal system applicable to the woman in question (as may be the case in economies where there is legal plurality), the answer used will be the one that applies to the majority of the population.

Answers to the questions are based on codified law and not how that law is applied in practice. Therefore, customary law is not taken into account unless it has been codified. Questions on the status of customary law within the legal system refer to its existence and position within the hierarchy of legislation, but do not assess its content. Reciprocal restrictions that govern the conduct of both spouses are not covered; this indicator measures only restrictions that govern the conduct of the wife, not the husband.

This topic addresses whether a woman can engage in certain legal transactions in the same way as a man. Differences related to property transactions are taken into account only for the using property indicator. Accessing institutions does not count this type of difference.

1. Are married women required by law to obey their husbands?

- The answer is “Yes” if
  - there is an explicit provision stating that a married woman must obey her husband; or
  - a provision states that disobedience toward her husband has legal ramifications for the wife, such as loss of maintenance.
- The answer is “No” if there is no provision that a married woman must obey her husband.
- Scoring: Yes = 0; No = 1.

2. Can a woman legally apply for a passport in the same way as a man?

- The answer is “Yes” if, upon reaching the legal age of majority, all civil legal acts can be completed and there are no differences in the way a woman or man obtains a passport.
- The answer is “No” if
  - an adult woman needs the permission or signature of her husband, father, other male relative or guardian to apply for a passport; or

- the passport application of an adult woman requires a reference to her husband or father’s name, any other male relative or guardian;
- documentation is required from a woman that is not required from a man, e.g., a marriage certificate.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

3. Can a woman legally apply for a national ID card in the same way as a man?

- The answer is “Yes” if there are no inequalities in the process for obtaining a national identity card. If married men must provide a marriage certificate or birth certificate as proof of name, whereas married women must provide a marriage certificate, the answer is still “Yes.”
- The answer is “No” if
  - a married woman must provide a marriage certificate, but a married man need not; or
  - a woman requires additional signatures, such as those of her husband, father, other male relative or guardian, which are not required for a man; or
  - a married woman must indicate the name of her spouse, but a married man is not so required; or
  - a woman must indicate the name of her father, other male relative or guardian, but a man is not required to do so; or
  - the identity card of a married woman displays the name of her spouse, but the identity card of a married man does not;
  - identity cards are optional for women, but required for men.
- The answer is “N/A” if there is no national identity card that is universally accepted based on an implemented national registration system that issues national ID cards.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0; N/A (no national ID) = not scored.

4. Can a woman legally travel outside the country in the same way as a man?

- The answer is “Yes” if there are no restrictions on a woman traveling alone internationally.
- The answer is “No” if permission, additional documentation or the presence of a guardian is required for a woman to leave the country; however, this permission must be different from what is required to get a passport, which is covered in a separate question.
- The answer is also “No” if the law requires a married woman to accompany her husband out of the country if he so wishes.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

5. Can a woman legally travel outside her home in the same way as a man?

- The answer is “Yes” if there are no restrictions on a woman traveling alone domestically.
- The answer is “No” if
  - permission, additional documentation or the presence of her husband or a guardian is required for a woman to travel domestically; or
  - a woman must justify her reasons to her husband, father or guardian for leaving the home;
  - leaving the home without a valid reason is considered disobedience with consequences under the law, for example, loss of her right to financial maintenance.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

6. Can a woman legally get a job or pursue a trade or profession in the same way as a man?
- The answer is “Yes” if
    - no permission is needed for a woman to get a job or practice a trade or profession; or
    - there is no restriction in family or civil law on a woman’s ability to work.
  - The answer is “No” if
    - a husband can prevent his wife from getting or keeping a job or pursuing a trade or profession; or
    - permission or additional documentation is required, or if a husband or guardian can prevent a woman from getting or keeping job or pursuing a trade or profession; or
    - it is considered a form of disobedience with legal ramifications for a wife to engage in employment contrary to her husband’s wishes or the interests of the family.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
7. Can a woman legally sign a contract in the same way as a man?
- The answer is “Yes” if full legal capacity is obtained upon the age of majority and there are no restrictions on a woman signing legally binding contracts.
  - The answer is “No” if a woman has limited legal capacity to sign a binding contract or needs the signature, consent or permission of her husband to legally bind herself.
  - This question does not concern restrictions on married women signing contracts specifically related to marital property governed by the default marital property regime; these are covered under the using property indicator.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
8. Can a woman legally register a business in the same way as a man?
- The answer is “Yes” if a woman obtains full legal capacity upon reaching the age of majority and there are no restrictions on a woman registering a business.
  - The answer is “No” if
    - a woman has limited legal capacity to register a business; this includes situations where she needs her husband’s or a guardian’s permission, signature or consent to register a business; or
    - the registration process at any stage requires additional information or documentation for women not required of men.
  - The answer is also “No” for member states of regional bodies, such as the Organization for the Harmonization of Corporate Law in Africa (OHADA) for which supranational law applies (e.g., OHADA Uniform Act on General Commercial Law) when domestic law contravenes these supranational rules and limits the legal capacity of women.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
9. Can a woman legally open a bank account in the same way as a man?
- The answer is “Yes” if
    - there are no restrictions on a woman opening a bank account;
    - the law explicitly states that a married woman may open a bank account, or that both spouses may open bank accounts in their own names.
  - The answer is “No” if
    - specific provisions limit the ability of a woman to open a bank account, such as those stating that a married woman who is separately employed from her husband may open a bank account in her own name (because that implies that a woman without a separate income stream may not); or
    - any other required permissions or additional documentation.
  - Only provisions from the body of family law in the economy are systematically reviewed.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
10. Can a woman legally choose where to live in the same way as a man?
- The answer is “Yes” if there are no restrictions on a woman choosing where to live.
  - The answer is “No” if there are explicit restrictions on a woman choosing where to live or if the husband chooses the family residence or marital home or has more weight in determining where the family will live.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
11. Can a woman legally be “head of household” or “head of family” in the same way as a man?
- The answer is “Yes” if the definition of head of household is codified and there are no explicit restrictions on a woman becoming “head of household” or “head of family.”
  - The answer is “No” if
    - there is an explicit restriction on a woman becoming “head of household” or “head of family,” e.g., a provision stating that only men or husbands can be so designated or that men “lead” or “represent the family;”
    - a male is designated as the default family member who receives the family book or equivalent document that is necessary for access to services.
  - The answer is “N/A” if the definition of head of household is not codified.

- This question does not assess gender inequalities in the tax code, which are captured by the providing incentives to work indicator.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

Using property

Assumptions

It is assumed that the woman

- Resides in the economy's main business city.
- Has reached the legal age of majority and is capable of making decisions as an adult; if there is no legal age of majority, the woman is assumed to be 30 years old.
- Is sane, competent, in good health and has no criminal record.
- Is a lawful citizen of the economy being examined.
- Where the question assumes that the woman or man is unmarried, she or he has never been married.
- Where the question assumes that the woman or man is married, the marriage is monogamous and registered with the authorities. De facto marriages or customary unions are not measured.
- Where the question assumes that the woman or man is married, the marital property regime under which she or he is married is assumed to be the default marital property regime, and it is also assumed that the marital property regime will not change during the course of the marriage. In economies where there is no default marital property regime, it is assumed that the couple is married under the most common regime for that jurisdiction.
- Where the answer differs according to the legal system that applies to the woman—as may occur in economies where legal plurality exists—the answer used will be the one that applies to the majority of the population.

The answers to these questions are based on the law as codified in the main business city and not the practice of that law. Therefore, customary law is not taken into account unless it has been codified. Unwritten, social or cultural norms are also not taken into account.

The questions for the using property indicator are designed to determine what management and control of property look like under the default marital property regime in each economy covered. For all questions relating to the ability of married women to carry out activities independently of their husbands, the key concern is reciprocity. Unequal treatment is counted only where a married man can carry out the activity and his wife is not able to do so equally.

The main areas of differentiation between women and men in exercising property rights lie in the rights granted under various marital property regimes. Some of these grant spouses equal treatment in property ownership. Other regimes grant husbands administrative control over jointly owned marital property. Still others grant husbands administrative control over their wives' property. The marital property regime also determines property ownership and administrative rights when a marriage is dissolved.

The default marital property regime is the set of rules that apply to the ownership and management of property within marriage and when the marriage ends, when there is no prenuptial agreement. Women, Business and the Law classifies default marital property regimes as follows:

Separation of property. All assets and income acquired by the spouses before they marry and during the marriage remain the separate property of the acquiring spouse. At the time of divorce or the death of one of the spouses, each spouse retains ownership of all assets and income brought to the marriage or acquired during the marriage by that person and any value that has accrued to that property.

Partial community property. Assets acquired before the marriage are regarded as the separate property of the acquiring spouse, and assets and income acquired after the marriage, with a few exceptions specified by law, are regarded as joint property of the couple. This regime also applies to cases where assets acquired before the marriage and assets acquired during the marriage are regarded as the separate property of the acquiring spouse, but the accrued value of the property acquired by any of the spouses is considered joint property. At the time of dissolution of the marriage by divorce or death, the joint property or its accrued value is divided equally between the spouses.

Full community property. All assets and income, whether brought into the marriage or acquired during the marriage—with a few exceptions specified by law—become the joint property of the couple. If the marriage is dissolved, all joint property is divided equally between the spouses.

Deferred full or partial community property. The rules of full or partial community of property apply at the time the marriage is dissolved; until then, separation of property applies.

Other. The default marital property regime does not fit any of the above four descriptions. This is also the case when the rules concerning the default marital property regime are not regulated by codified law, but are governed by unwritten customs.

There is no default marital property regime. The law requires the spouses to opt in to the marital property regime of their choice—with legal alternatives provided—before or at the time of the marriage. In economies where there is no default marital property regime, the most common regime is used when answering the subsequent questions.

12. Who legally administers marital property?

- For this question, marital property refers to all property owned by either spouse and both spouses during the marriage. The answer to this question assumes that the default marital property regime applies and is classified as follows:
- Original owner. Each spouse retains administrative power over the assets she or he brings into or acquires during the marriage and their accrued value. No consent is needed from the other spouse for transactions in separate property. This administrative scheme is usually found in separation of property regimes and can also be found in deferred full or partial community regimes. It does not cover special provisions concerning the marital home.
- Separate with spousal consent. Each spouse administers her or his separate property, but for major transactions, such as selling or pledging the property as collateral, spousal consent is needed. This administrative scheme is mostly found in separation of property regimes, but can also be found in deferred full or partial community and partial community regimes.
- Both must agree. Both spouses have equal rights in the administration and transaction of joint property; they perform all acts of administration together and, if one of the spouses has been delegated administrative rights by the other, spousal consent is implied. This administrative scheme is mostly seen in full and partial community property regimes.
- Husband. The husband has administrative rights over all property, including any separate property of the wife. This scheme is found only in partial community regimes.
- Other. This alternative applies wherever the administrative scheme does not fit into any of the previous categories. It includes, for example, cases in which in principle the law provides for both spouses to administer marital property, but if they disagree, the husband is given the power to ultimately decide or other members of the family have a say in how the property is administered. Where there is disagreement on how to administer marital property, a court may decide. This alternative also applies when the default marital property regime is based on unwritten custom.

- Scoring: "Husband" = 0; all other answers = 1.
13. Does the law provide for valuation of nonmonetary contributions?
- This question is designed to measure if, at the time a marriage is dissolved, the division of property benefits both spouses. The process of dividing property upon divorce is examined to identify whether caring for minor children, taking care of the family home or any other nonmonetized contribution from the stay-at-home spouse, usually the wife, is taken into consideration. It does not consider regular payment obligations in the form of maintenance or alimony.
  - The answer is "Yes"
    - where an explicit legal recognition of such contributions is found and the law provides for equal or equitable division of the property or the transfer of a lump sum to the stay-at-home spouse based on the nonmonetary contributions; or
    - when the default marital property regime is full community, partial community or deferred full or partial community, because these regimes implicitly recognize nonmonetary contributions at the time of property division and benefit both spouses regardless of who purchased the property or holds title to it.

- The answer is "No" where
    - the default marital property regime is separation of property or other, and there is no explicit legal provision providing for equal or equitable division of property based on nonmonetary contributions.
    - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
14. Do men and women have equal ownership rights to immovable property?
- The answer is "Yes" when
    - there is no specific legal restriction related to property applied to women or men based on gender; or
    - aspects related to property during marriage fall under a mix of custom, law and judicial precedent and no sources, including Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) reports, reveal the existence of inequality.
  - The answer is "No" when
    - legal restrictions on property ownership are applied to women or men based on gender; or
    - there are gender differences in the legal treatment of spousal property (e.g., if husbands are granted administrative control over marital property).
  - The answer is ".." where aspects related to property during marriage fall under unwritten custom or judicial discretion in the absence of a legal framework.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0; ".." = not scored.

15. Do sons and daughters have equal rights to inherit assets from their parents?

- This question examines whether there are gender-based differences in the rules of intestate succession for transfer of property from parents to children.
- The answer is “Yes” when the law recognizes children as heirs to property without any restrictions based on gender.
- The answer is also “Yes” when aspects related to inheritance fall under a mix of custom, law and judicial precedent and all sources, including CEDAW reports, do not reveal the existence of inequality.
- The answer is “No” when there are gender-based differences in the recognition of children as heirs to property.
- The answer is also “No” when aspects related to inheritance fall under custom and sources confirm that the customary system is influenced by unequal personal law.
- The answer is “..” where aspects related to inheritance fall under unwritten custom.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0; “..” = not scored.

16. Do female and male surviving spouses have equal rights to inherit assets?

- For this question, it is assumed that the deceased spouse left no children or any other heirs, other than the surviving spouse.
- This question examines whether both spouses have equal rank and rights to inherit assets when there is no will.
- The answer is “Yes” when surviving spouses of either gender have the same legal rights.
- The answer is also “Yes” when the aspects related to inheritance fall under a mix of custom, law and judicial precedent and secondary sources, including CEDAW reports, do not reveal the existence of inequality.

- The answer is “No” where there are gender-based differences in inheritance.
- The answer is also “No” when aspects related to inheritance fall under custom and sources confirm that the customary system is influenced by unequal personal law.
- The answer is “..” where aspects related to inheritance fall under unwritten custom.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0; “..” = not scored.

Getting a job

Assumptions

It is assumed that the woman

- Resides in the economy’s main business city.
- Has reached the legal age of majority and is capable of making decisions as an adult.
- Is a lawful citizen of the economy being examined.
- For purposes of determining parental benefits, is in a legally recognized marriage with the other parent of the child.
- For purposes of determining maternity or parental leave, that she gave birth to her first child without complications on June 1, 2017, at age 30, and her child is in good health.
- Is sane, competent, in good health and has no criminal record.
- Has been working long enough to accrue any maternity and parental benefits.
- Will be nursing until the child is 1 year old.

• Is working as a cashier in the food retail sector in a supermarket or grocery store that has 60 employees.

It is assumed that the man

- Resides in the economy’s main business city.
- Has reached the legal age of majority and is capable of making decisions as an adult.
- Is a lawful citizen of the economy being examined.
- For purposes of determining parental benefits, is in a legally recognized marriage with the other parent of the child.
- For purposes of determining paternity leave or parental leave, has a first child who was born on June 1, 2017, without complications, was 30 years old when his child was born and the child is in good health.
- Is sane, competent, in good health and has no criminal record.
- Has been working long enough to accrue any paternity and parental benefits.
- Is working as a cashier in the food retail sector in a supermarket or grocery store that has 60 employees.

The topic contains questions on leave benefits for expectant and new parents, workplace protections for women and parents, restrictions on women’s employment, and retirement ages. In general, the answers to the questions in the getting a job indicator are based on written law and not collective bargaining agreements; however, the latter are taken into account when two conditions are met:

- They cover more than 50% of the workforce in the food retail sector.
- They apply to individuals who were not party to the original collective bargaining agreement.

- 17. Is there paid leave available to women of at least 14 weeks?
- The answer is “Yes” if the law establishes at least 14 weeks of paid leave that is available to women for the birth of a child, either through maternity or parental leave.
  - The answer is “No” if the law does not establish paid leave for expectant and new mothers, or if the length of paid leave is less than 14 weeks.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No (because no paid leave) = 0; No (because paid leave < 14 weeks) = calculated as the distance to frontier where the frontier is 14 weeks.
- 18. Do women receive at least 2/3 of their wages for the first 14 weeks or the duration of the leave if it is shorter?
- The answer is “Yes” if
    - women receive at least 2/3 of their wages during the first 14 weeks of their leave (if their leave is longer than 14 weeks); or
    - women receive at least 2/3 of their wages during the duration of their leave (if their leave is shorter than 14 weeks).
  - The answer is “No” if
    - the law does not establish any paid leave for expectant and new mothers;
    - women receive less than 2/3 of their wages during their leave (or the first 14 weeks of their leave if the total leave is longer than 14 weeks).
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No (because no paid leave) = 0; No (because women receive less than 2/3 of their wages) = calculated as the distance to frontier where the frontier is 2/3 (67%).
- 19. What is the percentage of maternity leave benefits paid by the government?
- This question examines the percentage of maternity leave benefits that are administered by the government. “Government” refers to social insurance or public funds.
  - Where paid maternity leave does not exist but there is paid parental leave, the question examines the percentage of parental leave benefits paid by the government.
  - Employer contributions to government funds (such as social security) that pay leave benefits are not considered employer payment of maternity benefits.
  - The answer is 0% if the employer is solely liable for paying leave benefits.
  - The answer is N/A if there is no paid leave available to expectant and new mothers.
  - Scoring: proportion of maternity leave benefits paid by the government (i.e., if government pays all, answer is 100%, if employer pays all, answer is 0%). If N/A (there is no paid maternity leave) this question is not scored.
- 20. What is the difference between leave reserved for women and men relative to leave reserved for women, as a function of who pays?
- This question covers the difference between leave reserved for women and leave reserved for men relative to leave reserved to women as a function of who pays to recognize the possible burden of hiring women placed on employers.
  - Leave reserved for women includes paid maternity leave and days of paid parental leave allotted to the mother. Leave reserved for men includes paid paternity leave and days of paid parental leave allotted to the father.
- Scoring: The question is calculated and scored as
- $((\text{paid maternity leave} + \text{any mother quota in parental leave}) - (\text{paid paternity leave} + \text{any father quota in parental leave})) / (\text{paid maternity leave} + \text{any mother quota in parental leave}) * \text{percentage of leave paid by the government}$ ;
  - if the government pays 100%, the score is 1;
  - if there is no paid maternity leave this question is not scored.
- 21. Is there paid parental leave?
- The answer is “Yes” if the law explicitly mandates the right to some form of paid parental leave either shared between mother and father or as an individual entitlement.
  - The answer is “No” if the law does not explicitly mandate the right to some form of paid parental leave either shared between mother and father or as an individual entitlement.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
- 22. Does the law mandate equal remuneration for work of equal value?
- This question captures whether employers are legally obliged to pay equal remuneration to male and female employees who perform work of equal value.
  - “Remuneration” refers to the ordinary, basic or minimum wage or salary and any additional emoluments payable directly or indirectly, whether in cash or in kind, by the employer to the worker and arising from the worker’s employment.
  - “Work of equal value” refers not only to the same or similar jobs, but also to different jobs of the same value.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

23. Does the law mandate nondiscrimination based on gender in employment?<sup>1</sup>
- This question is designed to determine whether the law generally prevents or penalizes gender-based discrimination in employment.
  - Laws that mandate equal treatment or equality between women and men in employment are also counted for this question.
  - Where the law mandates nondiscrimination in multiple aspects of employment (such as in job advertisements, hiring and dismissal) on the basis of gender, the answer is “Yes.”
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
24. Is dismissal of pregnant workers prohibited?
- This question is designed to determine whether pregnancy can serve as grounds for dismissal.
  - The answer is “Yes” if the law explicitly prohibits or penalizes the dismissal of pregnant women or if termination of contract based on pregnancy is considered a form of unlawful termination, unfair dismissal or wrongful discharge.
  - The answer is “No” if the law only prohibits the dismissal of pregnant workers during maternity leave or for a limited period of the pregnancy.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
25. Can parents work flexibly?
- The answer is “Yes” if the law explicitly permits flexible work arrangements for employees who have minor children, such as part-time work, reduced hours, flextime work and teleworking. This includes the right to request flexible work and the right to obtain flexible work. It does not include parental leave that can be taken flexibly.
  - The answer is “No” if only women are entitled to flexible work.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
26. Can women work the same night hours as men?
- This question is designed to determine whether nonpregnant and nonnursing women are prohibited from working at night or cannot work the same night hours as men. Night-hour restrictions on women in specified industries are captured in later questions.
  - The answer is “Yes” if there are no restrictions on women working at night. If the law conditions women’s ability to work at night on employer compliance with safety measures (such as providing transportation to and from work), the answer is also “Yes.”
  - The answer is “No” if the law broadly prohibits women from working at night or limits the hours women can work.
  - The answer is also “No” if the law only allows women to work at night in certain circumstances, such as in cases of force majeure or if the woman works for her family’s business.
  - If various sectors of the economy are regulated separately (i.e., no central labor law), it is assumed that the woman is employed as a cashier in a grocery store or supermarket.
  - Where the law indicates that a given ministry or minister may promulgate regulations restricting women’s work at night, this is considered a restriction even if no such regulation has been issued.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
27. Can women work in jobs deemed hazardous, arduous or morally inappropriate in the same way as men?
- The answer is “Yes” if there are no laws that prohibit women from working in a broad and subjective category of jobs deemed hazardous, arduous, or morally or socially inappropriate.
  - The answer is “No” if
    - the employer can determine whether particular jobs are too hazardous for women but not for men. In such cases, the law explicitly uses the term “hazardous” or its synonyms to describe a broad category of jobs that women—but not men—are prohibited from doing. Work of a hazardous nature includes, for example, jobs that could have a harmful effect on or increased risk to women’s lives or health, given women’s psycho-physical qualities, or jobs not deemed to have a harmful effect on or increased risk to men’s life or health, given men’s psycho-physical qualities;
    - the employer can determine whether particular jobs are morally inappropriate or socially harmful for women but not for men. In such cases, the law explicitly uses the term “morally inappropriate” or its synonyms to describe a broad category of jobs that women—but not men—are prohibited from doing. Work that is morally inappropriate includes, for example, employment that is considered not in accordance with the “moral development” only of women;
    - the employer can determine whether particular jobs are too arduous for women but not for men. In such cases, the law explicitly uses the term “arduous” or its synonyms to describe a broad category of jobs that women—but not men—are prohibited from doing. Work of an arduous nature includes jobs that involve particularly hard manual labor or jobs that are considered to exceed women's capabilities;

- the law indicates that a given minister or ministry may promulgate regulations restricting women's work in hazardous, arduous, or morally or socially inappropriate jobs, even if no such regulation has been issued.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

28. Are women able to work in the same industries as men?

- The answer is "Yes" if there are no restrictions on women working in mining, construction, manufacturing, energy, water, agriculture and transportation sectors.
- The answer is "No" if there are full or partial restrictions on women working in mining, construction, manufacturing, energy, water, agriculture or transportation sectors.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

29. Are women able to perform the same tasks at work as men?

- The answer is "Yes" if
  - there are no restrictions on women working in metal work;
  - there are no restrictions on women engaging in jobs with a minimum weightlifting requirement, or if there are no differences between the amount of weight men and women can lift;
  - there are no other restrictions on women's employment (not including jobs in mining, construction, factories, agriculture, transport, energy, water sector, which are captured in separate questions).

- The answer is "No" if

- there are full or partial restrictions on women working in metal work;

- there are full or partial restrictions on women engaging in jobs that require lifting weights above a certain threshold;

- women cannot perform work requiring heavy lifting, for example, if the law prohibits women from working in jobs that involve the loading and unloading of goods;

- there are restrictions on women doing particular jobs—such as working with certain chemicals or substances—but not on men doing them; or

- women are prohibited from working in certain settings in which men are allowed to work.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

The following assumptions are specific to the following questions on retirement benefits:

- The individual was born in 1977.
- The individual has been continuously employed since age 25.
- The answers are rounded to the nearest year.

30. Are the ages at which men and women can retire with full pension benefits equal?

- The answer is "Yes" if the ages at which men and a women can retire with full pension benefits is the same.

- The answer is "No" if there is a difference in the age at which a man and a woman can retire with full pension benefits.

- The answer is "N/A" if there is no national law on pension benefits.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No (because women retire earlier) = calculated as distance to frontier where the frontier is 10 years; N/A = not scored.

31. Are the ages at which men and women can retire with partial pension benefits equal?

- This question examines the relative ages at which men and women can retire with partial but not with full pension benefits, because he or she did not accumulate enough work experience or contributions, has not reached the age that would qualify him or her for a full pension or continues to work part-time upon reaching the retirement age.

- The answer is "Yes" if the ages at which men and women can receive partial pension benefits are the same.

- The answer is "No" if there is no difference in the age at which a man and a woman can receive partial pension benefits.

- The answer is "N/A" if

- the law does not establish an age at which men and women can receive partial benefits; or
- there is no national law on pension benefits.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No (because women retire earlier) = calculated as distance to frontier where the frontier is 10 years; N/A = not scored.

32. Are the mandatory retirement ages for men and women equal?

- This question examines the relative ages at which men and women must cease employment or can be terminated by their employer. Even if the law allows employers and employees to contract for work beyond that age, retirement is still considered mandatory because the employer can legally oblige the employee to retire.

- The answer is "Yes" if the age at which a man or woman must retire is the same.

- The answer is “No” if the ages at which men or women must retire are different.
- The answer is “N/A” if there is no mandatory retirement age for men and women.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No (because women retire earlier) = calculated as distance to frontier where the frontier is 6 years; N/A = not scored.

Providing incentives to work

Assumptions

It is assumed that both parents

- Have reached the legal age of majority and are capable of making decisions as adults. If there is no legal age of majority, parents are assumed to be 30 years old.
- Are in a legally recognized marriage.
- Are sane, competent, in good health, have no criminal record, and are lawful citizens.
- Reside in the economy’s main business city.
- Are employed in a private sector company.
- Share one child.

33. Are mothers guaranteed an equivalent position after maternity leave?

- The question captures whether the employer has a legal obligation to reinstate an employee returning from maternity leave to an equivalent or better position than the employee had pre-leave.
- Where the maternity leave regime explicitly states that the employee may not be indefinitely replaced, the answer is assumed to be “Yes.”
- Where the maternity leave regime explicitly establishes a suspension of the employee’s contract, the answer is assumed to be “Yes.”

- In economies that also have parental leave and the law guarantees return after the leave to the same or an equivalent position paid at the same rate but is silent on guaranteeing the same position after maternity leave, the answer is “Yes.”
- In economies that only have parental leave and the law guarantees return after the leave to the same or an equivalent position paid at the same rate, the answer is “Yes.”
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

34. Does the government support or provide childcare services?

- This question captures public childcare services that are completely funded by the government or government-funded with co-pay by parents. It also covers public childcare centers that are available universally to all families regardless of their income level.
- Government support or nontax benefits include funding and/or nonmonetary support.
- The answer is “Yes” if
  - the government provides, establishes or mandates childcare services; or
  - childcare is available universally but there are priority criteria for admission when there is not enough space for all children; or
  - private, stand-alone childcare centers receive nontax benefits from the government in the form of financial or nonmonetary support, such as providing building and school equipment as well as start-up grants; or
  - private, stand-alone childcare centers receive nontax benefits only if they meet certain ordinary requirements, such as the number of children enrolled in the childcare center or the location of the childcare center.

- The answer is “No” if
  - government childcare service is provided to a group of people qualified by something other than income level; or
  - the service is 100% run by non-state institutions; or
  - private, stand-alone childcare centers do not receive any non-tax benefits; or
  - private childcare centers receive nontax benefits only if they meet certain extraordinary requirements, such as a budget deficit.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

35. Are payments for childcare tax deductible?

- The answer is “Yes” if childcare or education expenses are deductible in the personal income tax law; for this question, childcare expenses cover various options: kindergartens or crèches, day care centers, after-school centers, in-home care and child-minding arrangements.
- The answer is “No” if childcare or education payments are not deductible in the personal income tax law.
- The answer is “No” if childcare or education tax deductions are only applied to childcare allowances granted by the government (tax exemptions on government allowances).
- The answer is “No” if employees receive tax benefits on payments for the use of employer-provided childcare centers only.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

36. Is primary education free and compulsory?

- The answer is “Yes” if primary education is compulsory, fully publicly funded and provided by the government universally, regardless of the families' income level.

- The answer is "No" if either of the above elements are not met.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

37. Are there specific tax deductions or tax credits that are only applicable to men?

- This question is designed to determine whether the personal income tax law differentiates between men and women on deductions and credits and includes instances where tax-specific deductions and credits can only be granted to male heads of household.
- The answer is "Yes" if the personal income tax law grants tax deductions or credits that apply only to male taxpayers.
- The answer is "Yes" if the personal income tax law grants tax deductions or credits that can only be granted to the head of household and the tax law defines the head of household as the male by default.
- The answer is "No" if the personal income tax law does not differentiate between men and women in terms of tax benefits.
- The answer is "." where there is no information available on tax deductions or tax credits.
- Scoring: Yes = 0; No = 1; "." = not scored.

Going to court

Assumptions

It is assumed that the woman

- Resides in the economy's main business city.
- Has reached the legal age of majority and is capable of making decisions as an adult.

- Is sane, competent, in good health and has no criminal record.

- Where the answer differs according to the legal system that applies to the woman (e.g. where different laws govern different groups of people within an economy), the answer used is the one that applies to the majority of the population.

38. Does a woman's testimony carry the same evidentiary weight in court as a man's?

- This question covers the weight of women's evidentiary testimony in all court cases, and does not include differences in testimony when executing contracts (i.e., marriage).
- The answer is "Yes" if the law does not differentiate between the evidentiary value of women's and men's testimony.
- The answer is "No" if the law explicitly differentiates between the evidentiary value of women's and men's testimony.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

39. Does the law establish an anti-discrimination commission?<sup>2</sup>

- This question looks at institutions that have been established in addition to courts, but are state bodies with a constitutional and/or legislative mandate to protect and promote principles of equality. Although they are part of the state apparatus and funded by the state, they operate and function independently from the government.
- Commissions are specialized, independent bodies tasked with receiving complaints of gender discrimination. The bodies considered may take such forms as women's commissions, ombudspersons or national human rights institutions.
- The answer is "Yes" if the commission is mandated to receive complaints of gender discrimination by public and private actors.

- The answer is "No" if there is no such commission, or if the body in question does not receive complaints of gender discrimination by public and private actors.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

40. Does the law mandate legal aid in civil and family matters?<sup>3</sup>

- The answer is "Yes" if the constitution or another law establishes the right to legal aid or assistance in most civil and/or family matters.
- The answer is "No" if the constitution or another law provides for legal aid and assistance, but civil and/or family matters are not eligible.
- The answer is "No" if the constitution or another law establishes only the right to counsel or the mandatory presence of an attorney in civil matters.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

41. Is there a small claims court or a fast-track procedure for small claims?

- Small claims courts hear civil cases between private litigants involving relatively small amounts of money. Although the names of such courts vary by jurisdiction, common features include relaxed rules of civil procedure, the appearance of adversaries without legal representation, the use of plain language and informal evidentiary rules. Fast-track procedural rules for small claims operate similarly; however, cases are tried in courts of more general jurisdiction.
- The answer is "Yes" if
  - there is a small claims court or a fast-track procedure for civil claims of small value and a maximum value for cases that may be heard; and

- the small claims court or fast-track procedure has jurisdiction to hear at least general civil cases.
- The answer is “No” if
  - there is a small claims court or fast-track procedure, but it is competent only to hear commercial claims, not all civil claims; or
  - few types of civil disputes are within the jurisdiction of the small claims court (e.g., rent disputes only).
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

Building credit

The background information for the questions on credit registries and bureaus comes from the depth of credit information index that is part of the Doing Business 2018 getting credit indicator. That index covers rules affecting the scope, accessibility and quality of credit information available through private credit bureaus and public credit registries. Credit bureaus and registries are only considered if their coverage extends to at least 5% of the adult population within an economy.

42. Do retailers provide information to private credit bureaus or public credit registries?
- For the answer to this question to be “Yes,” it is sufficient that any private credit bureau or public credit registry in the economy in question collects information from any retailer.
  - The answer is “No” if retailers do not provide information to credit bureaus or registries.
  - The answer is “N/A” if there is no credit bureau or registry in the economy or if their coverage extends to less than 5% of the adult population.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0; N/A = 0.

43. Do utility companies provide information to private credit bureaus or public credit registries?
- For the answer to this question to be “Yes,” it is sufficient that any private credit bureau or public credit registry in the economy in question collects information from a utility company.
  - The answer is “No” if utility companies do not provide information to credit bureaus or registries.
  - The answer is “N/A” if there is no credit bureau or registry in the economy or if their coverage extends to less than 5% of the adult population.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0; N/A = 0.

44. Does the law prohibit discrimination by creditors on the basis of sex or gender in access to credit?
- The answer is “Yes” if
    - the law prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex or gender, or provides for equal access for both sexes when conducting financial transactions, such as applying for credit or loans; or
    - the law prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex or gender when conducting entrepreneurial activities or receiving financial assistance; or
    - the law prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex or gender or prescribes equality of the sexes when accessing goods and services, and the definition of services in law, regulation or legal interpretation covers financial services.
  - The answer is “No” if the law does not prohibit such discrimination.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

45. Does the law prohibit discrimination by creditors on the basis of marital status in access to credit?
- The answer is “Yes” if
    - the law specifically prohibits discrimination on the basis of marital status or provides for equal access irrespective of marital status when conducting financial transactions, such as applying for credit or loans; or
    - the law prohibits discrimination on the basis of marital status when conducting entrepreneurial activities or receiving financial assistance; or
    - the law prohibits discrimination on the basis of marital status when accessing goods and services, and the definition of services in law, regulation or legal interpretation covers financial services.
  - The answer is “No” if the law does not prohibit such discrimination.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

Assumptions

It is assumed that the woman

- Resides in the main business city of the economy being examined.
- Is a lawful citizen of the economy where she resides.

The answers to the questions in this topic are based on statutory or codified law for civil law systems, and on case law, i.e., law established by judicial decision in cases as binding precedent for common law systems. Therefore, customary law is not taken into account, unless it has been codified or upheld by case law, and the answers are based solely on the letter of the law and not the implementation or practice thereof.

46. Is there legislation specifically addressing domestic violence? If not, are there aggravated penalties for crimes committed against a spouse or family member?

- The answer is “Yes” if
  - there is legislation addressing domestic violence, i.e., violence between spouses, within the family or members of the same household or in interpersonal relationships, including intimate partner violence that includes criminal sanctions or provides for protection orders for domestic violence; or
  - the legislation addresses “harassment” that clearly affects physical and/or mental health, such that damage is implied, as within the scope of domestic violence.
- The answer is “No, but aggravated penalties exist” if there is no domestic violence legislation but penalties in the criminal code are increased for offenses committed by a spouse, family member or intimate partner.
- The answer is “No” if
  - there is no legislation addressing domestic violence or the law only refers to or prohibits domestic violence but does not provide for sanctions or protection orders; or
  - the law enables women to obtain a protection order only if the husband has been convicted of the offense or she has ceased to reside in the common home; or
  - the law protects only a specific category of women (e.g., pregnant), a specific member of the family (e.g., children), but not all family members, or defines the offense in connection with specific motives (e.g., violence against a person while performing a professional or civil duty); and

- there are no aggravated penalties for crimes committed against a spouse, family member or intimate partner.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No, but aggravated penalties exist = 0.5; No = 0.
- 47. Is there legislation on sexual harassment in employment?
- The question covers provisions on sexual harassment in the workplace or in employment, whether or not sanctions apply.
  - The answer is “Yes” if
    - there is a law or provision that specifically protects against sexual harassment in employment, including unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, verbal or physical conduct or gestures of a sexual nature, annoyance if understood to include harassment with sexual content, or any other behavior of a sexual nature that might reasonably be expected or be perceived to cause offense or humiliation to another in connection with employment, including provisions on inducing indecent or lewd behavior coupled with financial or official dependence or authority, abuse of position or authority, or language that can be clearly interpreted to mean such dependence or abuse; or sexual harassment is considered a form of discrimination in employment and the law protects against discrimination.
  - The answer is “No” if
    - there is no legislation specifically addressing sexual harassment in employment; or
    - the behavior or gesture of a sexual nature addressed in the law includes the use of force or violence or the threat of force or violence, which is understood to constitute a crime, e.g., sexual assault or abuse; or

- the conduct covered by legislation is not directed at a specific individual; or
  - the law only allows an employee to terminate employment based on sexual harassment but provides for no other protection or form of redress; however, a provision allowing the employer to terminate an employee’s contract for committing sexual harassment will be considered; or
  - the law or provision covers only public or only private sector employees, but not both; or
  - the law or provision protects only a specific category of women or those in a specific area or sector of employment, e.g., protection from sexual harassment in political functions, or applicable only to government or state-owned enterprises; or
  - the law accounts only for sexual acts, including intercourse or copulation, as clearly involving contact of or with genital organs; or
  - the law or provision states only that the employer has a duty to prevent sexual harassment, but no provisions exist to prohibit or provide sanctions or other form of redress for sexual harassment; or
  - the law addresses harassment in general but makes no reference to acts of a sexual nature or contact.
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
- 48. Is there legislation on sexual harassment in education?
- The question covers provisions addressing sexual harassment in education, education facilities, schools or where the offender is in the role of educator, professor or in charge of the education of the victim, whether or not there are sanctions associated with the provision.

- The answer is “Yes” if the law specifically covers sexual harassment in education or contains language that can clearly be interpreted as sexual harassment in education.
- The answer is “No” if
  - the law does not specifically cover sexual harassment in education; or
  - the law covers only education within the scope of work, such as vocational training in the workplace, but not education generally; or
  - the law covers sexual harassment only in public or only in private education, but not in both; or
  - the law or provision only covers students up to a certain age (e.g., 18 years).
- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

49. Are there criminal penalties for sexual harassment in employment?

- The answer is “Yes” if
  - the law establishes criminal sanctions, such as fines and imprisonment, for sexual harassment in employment.
- The answer is “No” if
  - There are no criminal sanctions for sexual harassment in employment; or
  - the law on sexual harassment in employment refers to penalties for more serious offenses in the criminal code, such as for sexual assault; or
  - the law only prohibits sexual harassment in employment and sets forth that the employer should apply discretionary sanctions.

- Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.
50. Are there civil remedies for sexual harassment in employment?
- The answer is “Yes” if
    - the law provides for civil remedies or compensation for victims of sexual harassment in employment or the workplace, such as recovery of monetary damages for loss of employment opportunities and wages, expenses and compensation for emotional damages; or
    - the provision on sexual harassment in employment or the workplace in the criminal code provides for reparation of damages for offenses covered by the code.
  - The answer is “No” if the law does not provide for civil remedies or compensation for victims of sexual harassment in employment or the workplace.
  - Scoring: Yes = 1; No = 0.

Summary of methodology changes

There were some changes in the methodology between Women, Business and the Law 2016 and Women, Business and the Law 2018. For that reason, the data for previous cycles—which can be found on the Women, Business and the Law website—were recomputed to match the new methodology. Four of the topics had changes in methodology, as described below:

Accessing institutions. The methodology for the questions on whether a woman can legally be designated “head of household” in the same way as a man will no longer reflect inequalities in the tax code, as these are captured by the providing incentives to work indicator.

Getting a job. It is now assumed that a woman or man earns the minimum wage rather than the average value added per worker for calculating maternity, paternity and parental benefits. Answers to the questions on parental benefits now reflect the applicable leave policies in force as of June 1, 2017. The length of paternity leave is now counted in work days when it is less than 30 days. The question on flexible work no longer requires easier access to flexible work to be provided to parents than to non-parents. The question on whether women can work the same night hours as men now captures laws that restrict women from working at night in the food retail sector in addition to broad restrictions on women’s night work. The questions on the ages at which men and women can retire with partial benefits are now answered as “N/A” where the law does not establish an age at which partial benefits can be collected. It is also no longer assumed that a woman has raised one child for purposes of calculating the age at which she can retire and receive pension benefits.

Providing incentives to work. The definition of childcare has been revised to cover services provided to children between the ages of 1 and 5. Previously, childcare covered services provided to children age 6 and below. The question on whether childcare expenses are tax deductible now covers education expenses in addition to childcare expenses (where there is an explicit reference to childcare).

Going to court. Explicit restrictions on women’s testimony relative to men’s across all civil and criminal cases are taken into account, except when differences exist in the execution of marriage contracts.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Data collection and analysis for Women, Business and the Law 2018 was conducted by a team led by Sarah Iqbal (Program Manager, Indicator Development), under the general direction of Rita Ramalho (Senior Manager, Global Indicators Group, Development Economics) since March 2017, and prior to that under Augusto López-Claros (Director, Global Indicators Group, Development Economics) and Melissa Johns (Adviser, Global Indicators Group, Development Economics). Overall guidance for the preparation of the report was provided by Shantayanan Devarajan (Senior Director, Development Economics, and Acting Chief Economist). The project was managed with the support of Tazeen Hasan and Tanya Primiani.

Members of the core research team included Souad Adnane, Maereg Tewoldebirhan Alemayehu, Gharam Alkastalani Dexter, Nayda Almodóvar-Reteguis, Nisha Arekapudi, Shirin Batshon, Julia Constanze Braunmiller, Diana Eugenia Chacon, Claudia Lenny Corminales, Maia D'Anna, Marina Elefante, Philippine de Maere, Dimitra Christina Heliotis, Juliette Heralut, Asif Islam, Kavell Gianina Joseph, Anna Kalashyan, Viktoria Khaitina, Gloria Daniele Kuoh, Elizabeth Makumbi, Marie Nezam, Alena Sakhonchik, Isabel Santagostino Recavarren, Warner G.
